Rose Melville as "Sis" Hopkins" is the attraction at the Academy of Music this week. This is her seventh season, and while she has been anxious to star in other roles managers have induced her to play the character which she made famous for another season. Her perosnal popularity and that of the play were amply demonstrated by the greeting of an andience that filled the theatre at last night's performance. The cast is much the same as appeared with her in the play last season. Every member of the cast seems to have improved and there was a snap and vim about last night's performance that could only be brought about by a cast of artists that work together like clock work. Indede, it might almost be said that even the star had improved. Mr. J. T. Ray as Obadiah Odlum, the undertaker. always calculating ahead on business, is as funny as William Gillette in "The Private Secretary." His eccentric dancing last night caused roars of laughter. Frank C. Hartwell, as "Pa Hopkins," and Florence Webster as "Ma Hopkins." are still superb. Frank Minzey, as "Ridy Scarboro," Sis's country lover, who finally wins her after she has become a "lady." despite the fascinations and the machinations of "Addison Vibert." a villain who plans to secure valuable lands belonging to Sis for a mere song, still reminds one of Abe Lincoln.
