PREFACE TO REVISED EDITION

WE are giving the public in this new edition eighteen admirable colored plates on three inserts which show the two most common methods of cutting beef, a chapter on economical dishes, one on Southern or Creole dishes, and about fifty new receipts, in addition to the same superfine cook book that has been received with so much favor.

It is our aim to improve the book in every way and keep it abreast of the times. No one—not even the United States government—has ever attempted such expensive illustrations of cuts of meat, and we believe they will be appreciated by every one who has occasion to order provisions.

The price of the book remains the same, and we are glad to furnish a greatly improved cook book of increased cost as our recognition of the friendly attitude of the great public toward our goods.

THE WALTER M. LOWNEY CO.

INTRODUCTION

WE present this cook book with confidence that it brings up to date the modern possibilities of the table. It is prepared by a woman who has devoted her life to scientific and artistic cooking, and who has recently been honored by appointment to full charge of the culinary department of one of the most advanced colleges for self-supporting women in the country. She speaks with knowledge and authority.

We hope the book will contribute something to the fine art of living in many homes, making those homes the happier and more attractive for the husband and children, and solving many a problem for brides and beginners.

Thousands of our most valued customers cannot afford to prepare many of these dishes very often for their tables. But there are special occasions when we all feel that we can have the best for ourselves and our guests. This book will stand the strain of such occasions.

There are hundreds of simple dishes here for all tastes, suitable for all pocket-books. With this book as a guide, it will be possible for any woman to live within her means and still have that infinite variety on the table which means so much for appetite and health, which we all wish for and which we wish for you all.

VALUE OF FOOD TO THE BODY

"FOOD is that which when taken into the body tends either to build tissue or to yield energy."

The chief offices of food are to build the material of the body, to repair the waste which is continually going on and to yield heat to keep the body warm.

Foods may be divided into tissue-building foods and fuel foods.

The tissue-building foods are such foods as milk, eggs, cheese, wheat, meat and the legumes. The fuel foods are sugars and starches and fats and oils.

In order to keep the body in a good condition a combination of the tissue-building foods and the fuel foods is necessary, with a supply of water to dissolve them. About 125 grams of tissue-building foods and 550 grams of the fuel foods is the amount required daily. A mixed diet, therefore, is the ideal diet for the healthy adult.

The changing of the tissues and the assimilation of food are very rapid in childhood and youth, so that the system demands at that time an abundant supply of such foods as meat, milk and eggs. When middle age is reached, the amount of such food should be decreased. Otherwise the tax on the organs which take care of the wastes will be so great that disease will follow.

Thus it is clear that people of different ages require different combinations and amounts of food. The kinds of food required to nourish the healthy body vary also with the sex, occupation and climate, as well as with the age and peculiarities of the individual. In order to judge of the relative value of food to the body it is necessary to find out what percentage of each nutritive constituent the food contains, how much energy it is capable of yielding, how much of the food eaten is digested, how much is absorbed, and whether the nutritive constituents are obtained at a reasonable cost.

Farmers' Bulletin No. 23, published by the United States Department of Agriculture, will be found interesting to those caring to study foods from the above standpoints.

Mr. W. O. Atwater, Ph.D., writes in Farmers' Bulletin No. 142, on "Food and Food Economy," the following table:—

NUTRITIVE INGREDIENTS (OR NUTRIENTS) OF FOOD

Food as purchased contains:	Edible portion e.g. , flesh of meat yolk and white of eggs wheat, flour, etc.	Water } Nutrients {	Protein Fats Carbohydrates Mineral matters

USES OF NUTRIENTS IN THE BODY

Protein e.g. , white (albumen) of eggs curd (casein) of milk lean meat gluten of wheat, etc.	Forms tissue	} All serve as fuel to yield energy in the forms of heat and muscular power.
Fats e.g. , fat of meat, butter, olive oil oils of corn, wheat, etc.	Are stored as fat
Carbohydrates e.g. , sugar, starch, etc.	Transformed into fat
Mineral Matters (ash) e.g. , phosphates of lime potash, soda, etc.	Share in forming digestion, etc.

Thus foods have different functions. The proteid or nitrogenous foods build up and repair the tissues; mineral matter and water are also necessary for this purpose. The tissues of the body cannot be kept in a healthy state unless these constituents of food are taken into the system regularly; only the proteid foods can repair the waste of the living tissue. The proteid foods, together with the fats and carbohydrates, may supply both power and heat for the body, but the special functions of the carbohydrates and fats are to keep the body warm and to supply energy.

The amount of proteid food required for a healthy adult is very difficult to determine. It is safe to state that too much proteid brings about undue strain upon the digestive apparatus, and that too little proteid reduces the working equipment of the body. The amount of fats and carbohydrates needed depend largely upon occupation and climate. The proteid foods are many, and contain the same chemical elements as the bodies which they are destined to feed; also they seem to be more completely taken care of in the body than the carbohydrate foods. Milk, cheese, eggs, meat, and fish are proteid foods. Of these milk is regarded as a typical food, as it contains all the nutritive constituents required by the body,—proteid, carbohydrates, fats, mineral matter, and water,—but it does not contain these constituents in the correct proportion. It is too rich in proteid and fat and too poor in carbohydrate to be a perfect food. It is a perfect food for the infant, because an excess of proteid and of fat is needed for the growth of the child. For the healthy man about eight pints daily would be required for complete nutrition. This, it is apparent, would be a very bulky food, and the system would be burdened with too large a proportion of water. Milk, on the other hand, is the cheapest source of proteid. It is claimed that one quart of good milk is equivalent in proteid to a pound of beefsteak, and that when combined with the correct proportion of carbohydrate food it possesses great nutritive and economic value. All of the proteid foods are deficient in starch, so must be combined with carbohydrates to properly nourish the body.

According to Mr. Atwater the proteid foods are more completely digested than the carbohydrates. This is probably because there is found in all carbohydrate foods a large proportion of cellulose or indigestible material enveloping the starch and sugar. The nutritive value of the carbohydrate foods is large if the starch and sugar, of which they are composed, can be separated from the cellulose. The normal diet is one which contains proteid foods, carbohydrate foods, fatty foods, with the correct proportion of mineral matter and sufficient water to moisten them.

The proper diet depends largely upon the occupation. People of sedentary habits and brain workers need more digestible food than the day laborer—therefore, the necessity of mixed diets; but diets should be varied as well as mixed, and the true housekeeper in planning meals thinks what was served at the preceding meal.

The cheapest diet is that which yields the largest amount of nutriment for the least expenditure of money. The most economical diet is that which is cheapest and at the same time best adapted to the needs of the user. The most expensive diet is not necessarily the most nutritious.

Every good housekeeper should know approximately the composition of the various foodstuffs, and so be able to make proper combinations of foods and substitutions when necessary. Hunger and thirst are provided by nature as guides in the choice of food, and if the bodily conditions are normal, these, as a rule, are safe guides to follow.

The nutritive value of many foods depends upon how they are cooked. Many raw foods are indigestible, but these same foods cooked are nutritious. The importance of proper cooking cannot be overestimated. Cooking changes the food so that the digestive juices can take care of it; cooking improves the flavor and the appearance, thus making the food more appetizing; and cooking kills disease germs, parasites, and other dangerous organisms.

Proper cooking and dainty serving make even cheap foods more palatable. This stimulates the digestive juices; hence food should be made appetizing in order to obtain the greatest nutritive value from it.

METHODS OF COOKING

Boiling

Boiling point is the temperature at which a fluid is converted into vapor, with the phenomenon of ebullition. The boiling point of water is 212 degrees Fahrenheit. In cooking, the term boiling means the cooking of food in a boiling liquid, and water is the liquid generally used. Rapidly boiling water is no hotter than when the agitation is less, but in some cases, as in the boiling of rice, violently boiling water is recommended for the purpose of keeping the grains of rice separated. The boiling point of water once reached can be held with a moderate amount of heat.

Food is generally boiled by putting immediately into boiling water. This sears the surface, and keeps in the juices; but if the water is to be used for soups, gravies, and so forth, the food is put into cold water and brought slowly to the boiling point. Salt is added to the boiling water ordinarily when cooking food, as it tends to keep the flavor in the food.

Roasting

Roasting, truly speaking, is cooking food before an open fire, so that roasting is seldom accomplished in modern kitchens.

Baking

Baking is cooking food by dry heat in an inclosed oven. The oven should be very hot when the food is first put in, then the heat reduced.

In baking meats, basting frequently with hot fat will drive the heat to the center and make the meat juicy.

Stewing

Stewing is cooking food in water kept below the boiling point, and is similar to simmering.

Fricasseeing

Fricasseeing is a combination of sautéing and simmering. The food is first sautéed and then simmered until tender.

Steaming

Moist steaming is accomplished by placing the food in a perforated dish over a kettle of boiling water and cooking until tender.

Dry steaming is accomplished by placing the food in the top of a double boiler and keeping the water boiling in the lower part until the food is cooked.

Simmering

Simmering is cooking in water at 185 degrees Fahrenheit or 27 degrees below the point of boiling. This method of cooking is employed where long, slow cooking is desired, as in making stews, soups and so forth; also for cooking tough cuts of meat.

As a rule, in both boiling and simmering, the kettle should be tightly covered.

Braising

Braising is a form of cooking generally adopted for cooking tough meats. The food to be braised is placed in a kettle with a few slices of salt pork, some vegetables, seasonings and a small amount of liquid, either water or stock. The kettle is then covered closely and the food cooked until tender. Braising is a long, slow process.

Frying

Frying is cooking food in hot fat, deep enough to cover the food. Lard, olive oil, cottolene or drippings may be used. The fat should be heated hot enough to brown a piece of bread a golden brown in forty seconds for cooked food, and in sixty seconds for uncooked food. There are various theories about the digestibility of fried food. The latest seems to be that food properly fried and drained may not be very indigestible. To prepare fat for frying, fill frying kettle one half full, and heat gradually. Avoid frying too much at a time, as the temperature will be reduced and the food much more liable to absorb fat. Reheat fat after each frying. Drain the food on brown paper.

Sautéing

Sautéing is cooking food in a frying pan in a small amount of fat. Food is less digestible cooked in this way than fried food.

Broiling

Broiling is cooking the food on a greased broiler before hot coals or the gas flame. The broiler should be held very near the flame at first to sear the surface of the food, and should be turned every ten seconds for the first minute of cooking, and afterwards occasionally.

Pan Broiling

Pan broiling is cooking the food in a hissing-hot frying pan without fat. It is employed where it is impossible to broil, and may be better accomplished where two frying pans are used, and the food turned from one to the other every ten seconds for the first minute and afterwards occasionally, as in broiling.

JUST HOW

How to Crumb, Egg and Crumb

For crumbing, dried bread crumbs which have been pounded or rolled until fine and then sifted are best. The bread may be broken in pieces and dried in the oven or merely allowed to stand in the open air until dried.

To prepare the egg, break into soup plate, beat until yolk and white are well blended, season with salt and pepper, dilute with two tablespoons cold water and use for dipping.

Food to be fried should be dried as much as possible, then dipped in crumbs, then placed in the egg, and thoroughly covered with the egg, then drained and dipped again in crumbs.

It is an economy of time to crumb all of the pieces to be fried, then egg all, and when drained, to crumb all. This may be done in the morning and the food fried when wanted. In this case, allow the prepared food to stand in kitchen fifteen or twenty minutes before frying. When fried always drain on brown paper.

How to bone Meat, Fish, Birds

Legs and loins of lamb and mutton are the meats ordinarily boned. The butcher will do it; but if it must be done at home, wipe the meat, and with a sharp knife scrape the meat from the bone, being careful not to cut through the skin. Fish to be boned generally have the heads cut off; then remove the flesh from one side of the backbone, and then from the other.

To bone birds, chickens, or turkeys, select undrawn birds, with head and feet left on. Remove pin feathers and singe. Draw tendons from legs by making an incision just below the knee joint, and with a strong skewer draw the tendons out one at a time. Loosen the skin near the feet and cut off feet. Make an incision through the skin from the neck to the tail, the entire length of the backbone. Scrape the flesh from the bones until the shoulder blade is found, then continue scraping around the wing joint. Scrape down the backbone to the thigh, then around the second joint and leg, cutting tendinous portion when necessary. When one side of backbone is boned, bone the other, then remove flesh from breastbone, on either side of bird. When flesh is all separated from bone, discard carcass, wipe flesh and skin, and arrange in original shape. The birds may be seasoned and broiled; or stuffed, sewed into shape and steamed. Small birds are generally prepared the former way, and large birds the latter way.

How to clarify Fat

When through frying, add a pared potato, cut in slices, to the fat, and let stand on back of range until potato has browned. Remove potato and strain fat through a cheese cloth. Fat clarified in this way may be used indefinitely.

How to clarify Melted Butter

Let melted butter stand in a dish on back of the range until the salt has settled, then pour off butter, leaving sediment in the bottom of the dish.

How to avoid the Burning of Fat

When fat is put on the range to heat for frying, put in a cube of bread. If the fat is forgotten, the bread will burn first, and the odor of the burned crumb will attract the attention. The burned flavor cannot be removed from burned fat.

How to try out Suet

Cut the suet in small pieces, place in top of double boiler, cover, and cook over hot water until all the fat is tried out; strain through a cheese cloth. This can be done in the oven if the top of the range is crowded.

How to Lard

Larding is accomplished by cutting strips of salt pork lengthwise with the rind two inches long and one quarter inch wide, and with aid of the larding needle drawing these pieces through the surface of the meat, taking a stitch an inch long and a quarter inch deep.

How to test Fat for Frying

Heat the fat. When a blue smoke begins to appear, drop in a cube of bread; if the bread browns a golden brown in forty seconds, the fat is hot enough for any food which has previously been cooked. Uncooked food requires a longer, slower frying; the cube of bread should brown in sixty seconds for such food.

Food cooked in fat tested in this way should never soak fat if one is careful to put a small enough quantity of food in at a time — not enough to cool the fat.

How to make Croquettes

For meat croquettes, cold cooked meat should be freed from skin and gristle, and cut quite fine, then mixed with a thick sauce to as soft a consistency as it is possible to handle. Chill before shaping. For vegetable croquettes the vegetables should be boiled, then mashed and seasoned. Chill before shaping.

To Shape. — Allow one rounding tablespoon of croquette mixture for each croquette, roll into a round ball, roll ball in crumbs, then shape either like a cylinder or pyramid; when all are perfect and uniform, dip in egg, then in crumbs.

How to prepare Sweetbreads

Soak in cold water from the time they come from the market until used. Drain, cover with two cups cold water, add four cloves, one and a half teaspoons salt, two tablespoons vinegar or lemon juice, and a slice of onion; simmer for one half hour, drain, cover with cold water, remove tubes and membranes. Broil whole; or if for larding, dip in egg, wrap in cheese cloth, and press under weight over night.

How to care for the Refrigerator

Select a large refrigerator, of simple construction and of hardwood, — the lining of zinc or marble and the shelves of slate or hardwood.

To keep the refrigerator clean, remove instantly any food spilled in any of the compartments. Wash the ice compartment and food chambers at least once a week with hot soapsuds, and for economy's sake do this when the ice is low. Pour boiling water down the waste pipe. Sal soda dissolved in the water tends to keep every part sweet and clean.

Shelves and all portable parts, when washed and scalded, should be placed in the sun to dry; if this is impossible, dry before a fire.

Keep a good supply of ice in the ice chamber; it is cheaper in the end.

Never keep the doors or covers of the refrigerator open unnecessarily long; it wastes the ice.

A good refrigerator properly cared for should last at least twenty-five years.

How to Caramelize

Place sugar in clean agate-ware frying pan, and stir continually until the sugar becomes a golden brown sirup.

How to Poach

Place food to be poached in frying pan half filled with boiling salted water. Cook below the boiling point from three to eight minutes.

How to cream Butter

Place butter in bowl, and mash against the sides of the bowl, with a spoon, until of a creamy consistency.

How to cut and Fold

Pour mixture into bowl, and cut through and through mixture with a spoon, then take up some of mixture in spoon, and turn spoon completely over, and fold under mixture. Continue this process until mixture is blended.

How to crease Frosting

When frosting is nearly cold, cut with a silver knife, wiping knife after making each crease.

CARVING

To master the art of carving one must understand the anatomy of the meat to be carved.

The carver should insist upon having a sharp knife, a large platter, and sufficient space to move his arms.

Whole Fish

The carving of fish is extremely simple. Run the knife the whole length of the back, then cut from the back to the middle of the fish; the flesh may then be separated from the bone. When one side is served, turn the fish over and carve the other side in the same way.

The center of the fish is considered the best, as it is the fattest portion. The meat around the head and neck is decidedly gelatinous.

Medium-sized fish, like mackerel, salmon, trout, and so forth, are cut through the bone, thus giving a piece of fish on either side of the backbone for each serving.

Small fish are generally served so as to make four fillets, — two fillets on either side of the backbone.

Beef

For carving roast beef, a long, broad-bladed knife is required. Always cut across the grain of the meat; never with the grain.

The joint of beef known as the Porterhouse roast or sirloin roast consists of the sirloin, the tenderloin, and the flank. The flank is tough, and if roasted with the meat, is generally used for some made dish, such as croquettes, or hashed meat on toast; it is seldom carved at the table.

The tenderloin and sirloin must be carved across the grain. Cut thin slices parallel to the ribs or at right angles with the backbone, then cut close to the backbone, thus separating the slices. Rib roasts are carved in the same way as the sirloin.

Rolled ribs and round of beef are carved in round slices as thin as possible, each slice having considerable fat mixed with the lean.

Beefsteaks are carved across the grain.

Sirloin Steak. — Cut slices at right angles to the vertebrae in both the sirloin and the tenderloin, then separate.

Lamb and Mutton

A leg of mutton is considered by many the most difficult piece of meat to carve. If the hip bone is removed, the carving of this joint is simple, but it is usually left in. Place the leg on the platter, with the skin side next the platter. Carve from the hip bone across the leg; these will be the largest slices, as they come from the part of the joint which has the most meat. The portions near the knuckle are to be carved in the same way; they will not be so rare as the thicker slices. Chops may be cut from the upper part of the leg.

Fore Quarter of Mutton or Lamb. — Remove the fore leg and the shoulder, then separate the rib chops. Every part of the fore quarter of lamb is sweet and tender, but the neck in the fore quarter of mutton should be used only for stewing. In carving the shoulder of either lamb or mutton, one must study the meat before cooking.

The Saddle of Mutton. — There are several ways of carving this joint. The fat, tenderloin and kidney should all be removed in one piece.

The most popular way is to cut long slices parallel with the backbone, on the portion nearest the tail, and slices diagonally on the portion nearest the neck.

The Loin of Mutton. — Generally this joint is carved by merely separating the chops, but it may be carved in the same manner as the saddle of mutton.

Veal

Fillet of Veal. — This cut is carved like the round of beef.

Shoulder of Veal. — The shoulder is often boned and stuffed. In that case, cut through the meat from side to side. If the bone is left in, carve in the same manner as the shoulder of mutton.

Loin of Veal. — This cut is often stuffed, and the kidney is always cooked with the meat. Carve the same as the sirloin of beef, in large, thin slices.

Pork

Pork Spareribs. — Serve one rib to each person.

Loin of Pork. — Chops may be carved and served, or the roast may be carved exactly like the sirloin of beef.

Roast Ham. — Cut through the meat to the bone, using the portion nearest the knuckle first. Ham should be cut in very thin slices.

Tongue. — The small end of the tongue is inferior to the thicker portion. Cut slices crosswise of the tongue and serve a slice from both portions to each person.

Roast Pig. — Place the head of the pig at the right hand of the carver. Cut off the ears, then the head; cut the head in halves. Cut the whole length of the backbone, dividing the creature in two pieces.

Cut off the leg of one half, then separate the shoulder from the body. Carve the ribs and loin at right angles with the backbone. Cut the other half in the same way. Young pig meat is very tender and the bones are soft, so that carving is an easy matter.

Poultry and Game

To carve Poultry. — Place the bird on the platter, with the head to the left and the side toward the carver. Insert the fork across the center of the breastbone. Remove the wing, then the leg, then the side bone between leg and body. Cut slices from the breast, running from breastbone to place from which wing was removed. Remove wishbone by cutting from end of breast to the left of the wing joint. Make an incision to the right of breastbone for removing stuffing.

Remove fork from breastbone and cut the leg in small portions. Serve a slice of light and a slice of dark meat to each person.

Serve one side of bird before carving the other side.

Broiled Chicken. — Cut through the breast and cut in halves at right angles with the top of leg. But if birds are small, serve one to each person.

To carve a Duck. — Cut off the wing and the leg the same as for poultry. Cut the breast meat parallel with the breastbone, beginning at the side between the wing joint and the thigh.

To carve a Goose. — Carve in the same manner as a roast duck, but cut the leg in several portions.

Grouse and Partridge. — These birds are carved like duck, although sometimes the breast is separated from the bone and one half breast is served to each person.

Pigeons, quails, and small birds are served whole and generally on toast.

MARKETING

The term marketing means to the ordinary housekeeper the buying of meats and vegetables only, but the buying of all articles necessary for housekeeping should be included under this head.

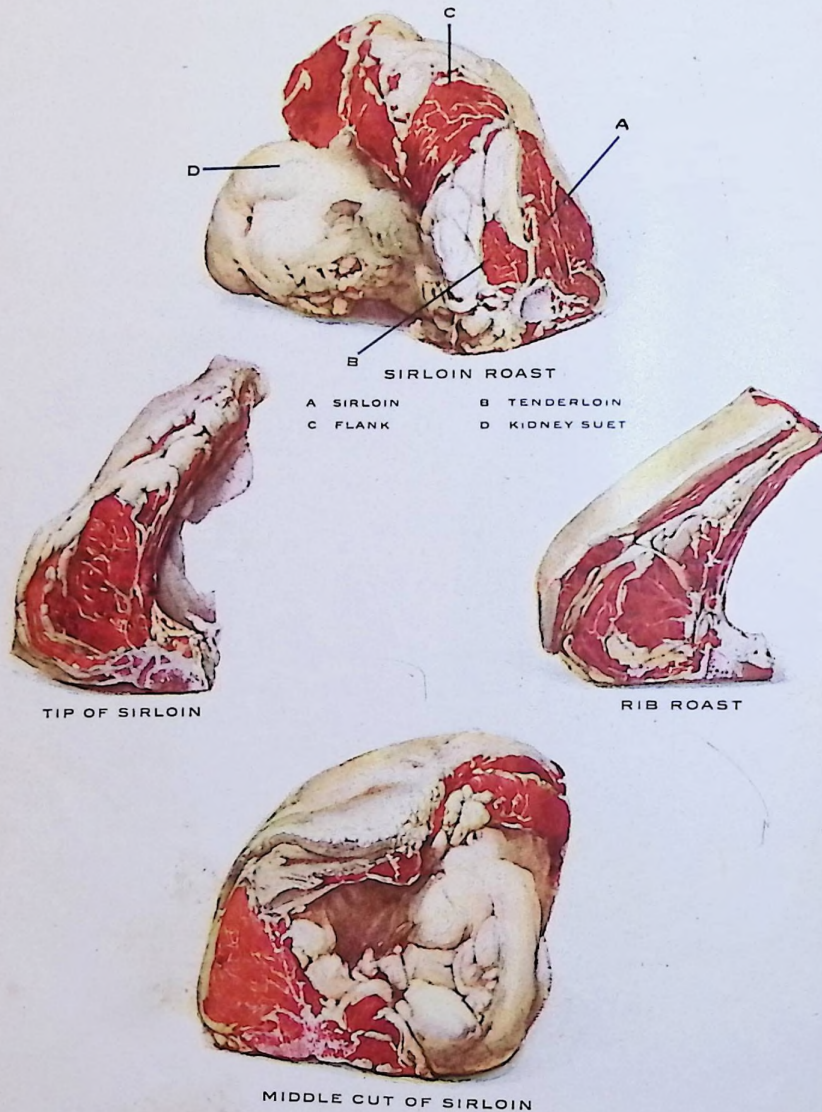

In order to market well the housekeeper must know what articles to buy in quantity and when to buy to the best advantage.

It is much more economical proportionately to buy for a large family than for a small one.

Staple articles such as bread flour, rice, spices, and so forth, should be bought in large quantities. Vegetables which keep well, such as potatoes, squashes, turnips, and so forth, should be bought in the early fall to last until spring, provided there is a cool, dark place in which to keep them. Meats must necessarily be purchased as needed, unless one has a large refrigerator in which to hang them.

Fish, with the exception of salt or smoked kinds, should be bought only when absolutely fresh. Fruits such as apples and pears may be bought in large quantities, but perishable fruits in small amounts only.

Beef

The beef creature is first divided into halves the length of the backbone, then each half is separated into the fore quarter and the hind quarter.

In the fore quarter we have in Boston markets —

A side of beef weighs on the average about 450 pounds.

Beef when first cut is dark purple, but turns red on exposure to the air. Good beef has a heavy layer of fat on the outside, which is yellowish white and crumbly; the inside fat is white. Best quality beef has a large percentage of fat and a small proportion of water.

Description of Cuts of Beef

In the Boston markets, the part marked (4) in the side of beef in Plate A has three ribs left on and the whole piece is called the sirloin. It is divided by the butcher into the tip which has one muscle only, the middle and the first cut. The fillet or tenderloin of beef is found just under the first rib. It begins in a small point and increases in thickness as it runs back. It ends in an obtuse point at the hip bone. It is always covered with a thick bed of suet and the kidneys are embedded in this suet at the end near the ribs. Sirloin roasts are considered by many the best roasts. They are expensive cuts as they contain considerable bone, and in a large creature, a large amount of tough flank, but as they are tender, juicy and of good flavor they are popular pieces.

Porterhouse Steaks are sirloin steaks cut from the sirloin nearest the rump; they always have a large piece of tenderloin. They are generally a few cents per pound more than the sirloin without the tenderloin. Sirloin Steaks are cut from all parts of the loin.

The rump joins the sirloin as shown in Plate A. The back of the rump is the best piece for roasting as it contains no bone; it is more economical than the sirloin roasts, but as the flavor is different it is not so popular. The middle and face of the rump are both used for roasts, but are less juicy and tender than the back. Both of these pieces are often used for beef à la mode.

Rump Steaks are cut with the grain of the meat and across the grain; the former are tough and the latter are generally tender and juicy; they are cut from the part marked (5) in Plate A. In the cross cut rump steak there is a piece of tenderloin.

The aitch bone, number (8) in Plate A, contains a large proportion of bone; if a large roast is cut, a portion of the rump and a part of the round is included, so considering the price, which is as many cents per pound as there are pounds, it is not an expensive piece as it can be used for a roast one day and made into a stew the next.

The round of beef as shown in Plate C is divided into the top and the bottom. The top is used for steaks and roasts. The first few slices are quite tender. The third slice is the best for steak as it has only one muscle. The farther down the leg the steak is cut the tougher it becomes. The bottom of the round must necessarily be tough because of the large number of tendons. It may be easily distinguished from the top as it contains two muscles. It is used principally for making beef tea or Hamburg Steak.

The vein is used for roasting or braising. The meat is usually stringy but of very good flavor.

The hind shin is used only for stews or soup stock. The fore shin contains less meat but is sometimes used for the same purposes as the hind shin. The pieces marked 12, 13, 14 in Plate A are usually corned.

Number (3) in Plate A is the rib roast. It contains five ribs, the first three ribs being the best part of the piece.

Number (2) in Plate A is the chuck rib piece. This contains the shoulder blade and is consequently tough. It is best for stews or braising, although it may be used for roasting. The bones are frequently removed and the piece tied into a round roast, but at best it is tough although the flavor is good. The neck is used principally for soup stock, stews and beef tea.

If we consult Plate D representing the New York cuts of beef, we find that the part marked (3) is called the Rib Piece. The thirteen ribs are left in this piece. It takes in part of what is called Sirloin in the Boston markets. In New York the ribs are cut much longer than in Boston and the price per pound is less, but as this gives a tough portion of the flank, the cost, in reality, is just as great. The part marked (4) is the sirloin and is used both for roasts and steaks. When there is a large piece of tenderloin on the steak it is called a Porterhouse Steak, but when there is only a small piece of tenderloin it is called Short Steak or Delmonico Steak. From this cut nearest the rump we get the hip bone, the flat bone, and the round bone steaks. There are three round bone steaks, which are generally rather inferior. The flat bone steaks are also three in number and better than the round bone steaks. The hip bone steaks are the best of these three and contain a small piece of tenderloin. The rump (5) is divided into two pieces, one piece having the hip bone and the other the backbone. It is generally corned. The round furnishes meat for steaks, which are of excellent flavor, but not very tender. It also makes a good piece for braising. The bottom of the round is a much poorer cut, it contains so many muscles and tendons. It is tough and so only suitable for stock or beef tea.

The Cross Ribs, number (12), make a good roasting piece. It is economical as it is solid meat, and it is quite tender as the muscles all run in one direction. The Shoulder Clod, number (14), has tendons running in all directions; it is consequently tough. It is used for Hamburg Steak or for any dishes which require long slow cooking. Numbers 9, 10, 11 and 13 are used for corning and numbers 8 and 15 are used for soup stock.

Lamb and Mutton

Lamb and mutton are divided into halves, or "sides," by cutting the entire length of the backbone the same as beef.

The fore quarter is divided into the —

Parts	How Cooked
Shoulder	Boiled, Steamed, Roasted
Neck	Stewed, Braised

The hind quarter is divided into the —

Parts	How Cooked
Leg	Roasted, Braised, Boiled
Loin	Roasted, Broiled
Saddle	Roasted

The best lamb is from a creature eight to twelve weeks old. Lamb may always be distinguished from mutton by the inner redness of the bone. Mutton should have a large amount of white hard fat, and the flesh should be fine-grained and pink to red in color.

The strong mutton flavor may be lessened by removing the pink outer skin, and also by taking off the caul before cooking the leg.

Veal

Veal is cut similarly to lamb.

The fore quarter is divided into —

Parts	How Cooked
Head	Boiled
Breast	Stewed
Shoulder	Stewed or Roasted
Ribs	Stewed or Roasted
Neck	Stewed

The hind quarter is divided into —

Parts	How Cooked
Loin	Stewed, Sautéd, Roasted, Broiled
Leg	Stewed, Sautéd, Roasted

Other parts of the veal creature used as food —

Parts	How Cooked
Tongue	Boiled, Braised
Brains	Stewed, Scalloped
Heart	Baked, Braised
Liver	Broiled, Sautéd
Kidneys	Boiled, Stewed
Sweetbreads	Stewed, Sautéd, Fried

The best veal is from a calf six to twelve weeks old. The meat should be pinkish white, fine-grained, and tender, and there should be a large amount of fine white fat on the legs and around the kidneys.

Pork

Fresh pork is not so popular a meat as corned or salted, although fresh pork from a pig which has been carefully fed before killing is a delicate meat.

The upper part of the fore legs, or the shoulders, and the upper parts of the hind legs, or the hams, are salted and smoked. The sides of the pork creature are salted and smoked for bacon.

The fat is removed from the loin and ribs, and these are sold for roasts or chops; the fat is pickled and used for salt pork.

The head is used for making souse and cheese.

The feet are sold fresh or pickled.

The brains, livers, and kidneys are also used the same as those of beef.

Poultry and Game

Poultry includes all domestic birds.

In buying poultry, select birds which have been freshly killed and hand-picked.

Pin feathers are found on young birds, and hairs on older birds. The birds should be short and plump, with considerable meat on the breast, fat, but not too fat.

Young birds have the cartilage at the end of the breast-bone soft and pliable.

For roasting, buy poultry from three months to a year old. For braising, stewing, and slower methods of cooking, buy older birds, as they contain a larger proportion of meat than the younger birds.

Game includes animals that are hunted in field or forest.

Venison is cut like mutton. The meat is much darker than beef meat, and the fat is whiter; it is cooked in the same ways as mutton.

Birds are sold with the feathers on, but have the market man remove them. All game is expensive, and so is a delicacy. In buying game, that which has hung three weeks or more is considered best.

DINNERS AND LUNCHEONS

The Formal Dinner

A formal dinner generally consists of ten courses, but may be eight or twelve. In order to have one harmonious whole, the different courses must blend well with each other. Avoid repetition; if oysters appear in the first course, they must not appear again. Observe these two points particularly in arranging the table: first, have the table linen immaculate and without folds; and second, arrange the covers with mathematical exactness.

The table may be square, oblong, or round; it must be covered with a soft pad, and then with the tablecloth, which should hang over the sides of the table at least one quarter of a yard on every side.

The selection of guests for a formal dinner is extremely important, and the seating at the table so that all are congenial takes some time to plan. Name-cards should be placed at each cover. Each gentleman should be given a card, on entering the dressing room, with the name of the lady whom he is to escort to the dining room, and the letters R or L, also on the card, indicating to the right or left of the hostess.

When dinner is announced, the host with the guest of honor leads the way to the dining room, followed by the other men with their ladies, and the hostess with the gentleman of honor brings up the rear. The guests all stand behind their chairs until the hostess makes a move to be seated; then the men push up the chairs for the ladies, each lady seating herself from the left of her chair.

The decoration of the table should be simple and low in design and in the center of the table. A small flower may also be placed at the right of each cover. Of course the colors of the flowers must harmonize with the china, but otherwise individual taste should be exercised.

The illumination of the table is most important. If candles are used, they must be so arranged as not to interfere with the guests, and the shades so placed that they will slip down as the candle burns. If candle light is insufficient, try if possible to have the lights come from the side rather than from above.

The Cover.—The place for each guest and the necessary plate, silver, glasses, knives, and napkin is called the cover.

Arrangement of Cover.—Allow twenty inches for every person. Place a ten-inch service plate, having decorations, right side up, in the center of this space, and one and one half inches from the edge of the table.

Arrange knives, edges toward plate, in the order in which they will be needed, beginning at the right. At the right of knives, place soup spoon, bowl up; at the right of soup spoon, the oyster fork, with tines up; the other forks, with tines up, at the left of the plate, in the order in which they will be needed, beginning with the extreme left.

If there are too many courses to admit of all the silver being put on at once, extra silver may be placed at each cover just before serving the course requiring it.

The glass for water should be placed just above the center of the plate, to the right, the wineglasses to the right of the water glass, in the order in which they are to be used. Place the napkins either to the left of the forks, or over service plate. They should be so folded as to hold a bread stick or dinner roll.

The name card is generally placed on top of the napkin or over the plate.

Serving the Formal Dinner.—The dinner may be served from the butler's pantry, having each course arranged on individual plates, and placed by the waitress, on the right side of the guest, with the right hand, and anything which is to be served with the course, passed on a tray to the left of the guest and low enough and sufficiently near to the guest, to be easily taken with the right hand. Served in this way, there is less interruption to conversation.

Or each dish may be so arranged on a platter or serving dish on a tray that the guest may easily serve himself. Served in this way, the waitress places plates before each guest before passing the courses.

At present the service plate is quite universally used; that is, the space in front of the guest is always occupied with a plate. When the waitress removes the course plate with the left hand, she places another plate with the right hand. In this way of serving, the tray, if used at all, is only used when the food is passed, not for removing dishes.

Removal of Courses.—When every one has finished, the waitress removes one plate at a time, beginning with the hostess or with the guest at the right of the hostess.

Before the dessert, everything not needed for this course should be removed from the table; if there are crumbs, they should be carefully brushed with a napkin on to a plate or tray. After this is accomplished, place the dessert dishes from the right. While the dessert is being eaten, the finger bowl, filled one third full of tepid water, with a slice of lemon or a geranium leaf or a flower in it, set on a doily on a plate, may be placed in front of and above the dessert plate. When the dessert plate is removed, the finger bowl is moved into the space. If fruit follows the dessert, the guest removes the finger bowl and doily from the plate and uses that plate for the fruit.

If coffee is served in the dining room, the finger bowls are not placed until after the coffee, but coffee is usually served in the drawing room.

Order of Service.—The guests on the right of the host and hostess are served first in the first course, in the second course the guests on the left, in the third course the second guest on the right of the host and hostess, and so on in rotation, so that no guest is served twice first. Some hostesses insist upon being served first. If the different courses are passed rather than served from the butler's pantry, this may be a good plan, but otherwise there seems to be no reason for it.

The Informal Dinner

The hostess serves the soup, and the host the fish and the roast. Vegetables, sauces, and entrées are served from the side.

Either the host or hostess makes the salad, and the hostess serves the dessert and the coffee.

The cover is arranged the same as for the Formal Dinner.

The Formal Luncheon

The table may be covered or bare. If bare, use doilies for plates and glasses.

The arrangement of the cover is the same as for the Formal Dinner.

Lighter dishes are served for luncheon than for dinner; entrées take the place of the roast.

Soup or bouillon is served in cups. Fruit may be served for the first course instead of canapés.

The hostess sometimes serves the salad and the coffee, but it is better to have all serving from the side.

The Formal Breakfast

This really is the same as the Formal Luncheon except that men are invited with the ladies, and coffee is served throughout the meal.

The Informal Luncheon

Like the Informal Dinner except that the roasts are omitted.

When luncheon is announced, the first course may be on the table, and the dishes required for the remaining courses arranged on the side table.

Seldom more than three courses are served.

Tea, coffee, or cocoa are served throughout the meal.

BUTLER'S DUTIES

A butler is generally given full charge of the dining room, as well as of the other men servants.

He waits on the table at breakfast, usually alone; but if the family is large or there are guests present, he may be assisted.

He directs the washing of dishes and the cleaning of the silver. He prepares the salad. He attends to the bell, to the fires, to the lighting of the house. He makes and serves afternoon tea and sets the table for dinner.

He announces all the meals, serves the dinner, does all the carving. If he is assisted, he serves the principal dishes, and the assistant serves the vegetables and sauces.

He is responsible for the safety of the silver, for the arrangement of the flowers and fruits, and for the proper serving of the wines. He has full charge of all refreshments served in the evening and is responsible for the locking of the house at night.

He alternates with the footman or waitress in answering the bell in the evening.

GARNISHINGS

It has been said that "what appeals to the eye generally appeals to the palate."

Use care and taste in serving; dainty service will make the simplest food most attractive.

Never allow any food which looks unsightly to be served. Toasted bread, burned on one side, may take away the appetite, but toasted a golden brown on both sides, with crusts cut off and then cut in strips and served in between the folds of a fresh doily, will appeal to the most fastidious.

Parsley is always used to garnish meats. Meats should be skewered into shapely pieces before being cooked, and served on dishes to display them well.

Steaks and chops should be trimmed before cooking, then broiled evenly on all sides — never burned.

Rib chops should be garnished with chop frills.

Slices of lemon, hard-cooked eggs cut in strips, chopped pickles, and parsley are used for garnishing fish.

Cold sweet dishes are garnished mostly with jellies cut in cubes, and candied fruits, red cherries, and angelica being the most popular.

Nuts and raisins are also used.

Ice creams are garnished with meringues and spun sugar.

Cakes are garnished with nuts and plain and fancy frostings put through a pastry bag and tube.

Whatever garnishing is used, avoid overdoing the matter; the simplest is always the most attractive.

SOUPS

Brown soup stock is made from beef and vegetables, or from beef, veal and fowl, and vegetables.

Veal with onion and celery and seasonings makes white stock; or veal and chicken together, with celery, onions, and seasonings, are used for white stock.

Cream soups are generally made without stock, milk or cream being the liquid used, the foundation made from fish or vegetables.

Chicken Stock is made from fowl, resembles white stock, but not quite so rich.

The meats used for soups are the poorer parts of the creature — the shin, the round, the neck of beef, the knuckle of veal, and the whole bird of fowls.

A bouquet of sweet herbs is used for seasoning soups;

it is composed of parsley, bay leaf, cloves, peppercorns, thyme and marjoram.

Stock Soups

Skill, patience and good materials are necessary for the making of good soup. In order to draw out and dissolve the nutritive and flavoring qualities of meat, cut the meat into small pieces, cover with cold water, and let stand at least an hour, then heat very gradually.

For a rich stock allow one pint of water to each pound of meat and bone, having only one quarter pound bone and three quarters meat. One kind of meat may be used, or several kinds. If soup is made from remnants of cold meat, be sure to add a small amount of fresh meat to give added flavor. Remember that if the contents of the soup kettle are allowed to boil for any length of time, it will be almost impossible to secure a clear soup from the stock.

How to clear Soup Stock

Allow the white and shell of one egg for two quarts of strained stock. Beat the white, add crushed shell and the cold stock, pour into kettle, set over the fire, and stir constantly until the boiling point is reached; boil three minutes without stirring, then simmer for ten minutes, strain through sieve, then through a cheese cloth; reheat and serve. If these directions are followed, an absolutely clear soup will be the result.

To keep Soup Stock

When the stock is ready to strain, strain into several receptacles; a coating of fat will form on the top, which serves to keep out the air. This fat must be removed before clearing the stock. Stock with a coating of fat will keep a week in summer and several weeks in winter. If the weather is very warm, scald the stock, then cool quickly.

Asparagus Soup

1 can of asparagus or	2 teaspoons salt
1 bunch of asparagus	a few grains cayenne
4 cups cold water	1 cup cream
3 tablespoons butter	2 slices onion
3 tablespoons flour	$\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon white pepper
	2 cups milk

Wash asparagus if fresh and break off tips; break remainder of stalks into small pieces. Cook tips and stalks in cold water separately. When tender, drain; reserve water. Keep tips for garnishing soup. Press stalks through a purée sieve. Scald milk with onion, remove onion, add asparagus water, and thicken with flour and butter cooked together. Bring mixture to boiling point; add cream and seasonings. Pour over tips and serve.

NOTE.—If canned asparagus is used, drain, add water and cook in milk in a double boiler twenty minutes. Then drain and proceed as with fresh asparagus.

Artichoke Soup

1 can artichokes	2 cups scalded milk
3 cups cold water	1 egg
2 tablespoons butter	1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons flour	1 slice onion
	few grains cayenne

Cook artichokes and onion in water till tender. Drain, press through sieve, and return to water. Melt butter; add flour and scalded milk. Cook until mixture thickens. Combine mixtures, add seasonings, and just before serving pour on to beaten egg.

Bean Soup

1 cup Lima beans	4 tablespoons butter
4 cups cold water	2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons chopped onion	3 cups milk
1 sprig parsley	salt and cayenne
1 stalk celery	1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons carrot	$\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon pepper

Soak beans over night. Cook beans, onion, parsley, celery and carrot in cold water; when tender rub through a sieve. Melt butter; add flour, milk and seasonings; cook five minutes. Combine mixtures and serve.

One cup stewed tomatoes added to this soup makes a pleasant variation.

CHAPTER III

FISH

FOR convenience' sake we divide fish into two classes — vertebrate and shellfish.

The freshness of fish is best determined by the odor. If the flesh of the fish is soft and flabby, the fish has been frozen, or has been kept too long.

Fish Fillets

Fish fillets are the flesh of vertebrate fish separated from the bone and cut into large or small pieces.

Fish Forcemeat

Is the flesh of fish finely chopped and pressed through a fine sieve before being cooked.

Fish Stock

Is the seasoned liquid in which fish has been cooked.

Garnishings for Fish

Parsley, lemon slices, lemon baskets, lemon slices sprinkled with finely chopped parsley, chopped red or green pepper, potato balls, olives, hard-cooked eggs, capers, and pickles cut lengthwise and spread to resemble a fan; mashed potato and mushrooms, cucumbers and tomatoes; maître d'hôtel butter and water cress.

Boiled Fish

a 4-pound cod	2 quarts water
2 tablespoons chopped onion	1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons chopped carrot	bay leaf and clove
1 sprig parsley	$\frac{1}{4}$ cup vinegar

Wash and wipe fish. Cover with boiling water and add remaining ingredients; bring quickly to the boiling point, and keep just below the boiling point until fish separates slightly in flakes—about thirty minutes.

A fish kettle is the most convenient receptacle for cooking fish whole. If one is not available, use a piece of cheese cloth just large enough to cover fish and tie loosely with string.

All other boiled fish may be cooked in the same way as boiled cod.

STEAMED FISH

Steamed Salmon

Wrap four pounds of salmon in a piece of cheese cloth. Set in a plate in a steamer and cook until fish separates from bone—from forty-five to sixty minutes, according to thickness of fish.

All other fish may be steamed in the same way.

BROILED FISH

Broiled Mackerel

Wash and wipe fish; grease a wire broiler with clarified butter, lard, or pork fat. Season fish with salt and pepper, place on greased broiler and broil over clear fire, turning every five seconds. If the fish is a thick one, hold at quite a distance from fire until fish is cooked through, then hold nearer embers to brown. Separate, first skin side, then flesh side, with sharp knife from the broiler. Remove to hot platter, butter, garnish and serve.

FRIED FISH

Fried Smelts

Wash, dry thoroughly, and sprinkle smelts with salt, pepper and flour; dip in beaten egg which has also been seasoned with salt and pepper; drain and dip in flour, meal, or sifted bread crumbs.

The fish must be completely covered with egg and crumbs. Fry in deep fat, first testing fat with a crumb of bread, which should brown delicately in one minute.

Smelts may be cooked with their heads on, or the backbone may be removed and the fish rolled up in the shape of a muff, or they may be skewered in the shape of a ring.

When fried, drain on brown paper and serve on hot platter; garnish with lemon baskets filled with Mayonnaise Dressing and parsley.

Any small fish may be fried in the same way; large fish are generally cut in fillets, prepared and fried in the same way.

BAKED FISH

2 tablespoons butter	1 tablespoon chopped pickles
1 cup cracker crumbs or dried bread crumbs	1 teaspoon salt, few drops onion juice
1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley	$\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk or water

Melt butter, add remaining ingredients, and stir lightly with a fork until heated through. If a dry stuffing is preferred, omit liquid.

Wash and wipe bluefish, stuff, and sew. Cut three gashes on either side of fish and insert a slice of salt pork in each gash (if desired fancy, pink the edges of the salt pork). Season with salt and pepper, brush with melted butter, and dredge with flour. Place on a greased fish sheet, or on two four-inch-wide pieces of cheese cloth. Set in dripping pan, surround with finely chopped pork; bake, allowing fifteen minutes to the pound; baste with salt pork fat. There should be sufficient in the pan; if not, try out an additional quantity of pork.

When the fish is browned on one side, it should be turned, basted and browned on the other. To avoid this turning, many prefer to skewer the fish in the shape of the letter S, and place as if swimming in the pan.

If cracker crumbs are used, combine butter and cracker crumbs and add to oyster mixture.

Oysters and oyster liquor must not be added to milk until just before serving, as the mixture is apt to curdle if the oysters are allowed to stand in the milk.

Spindled Oysters

Place mixture in buttered baking dish or scallop shells; dot with butter; cover with buttered and seasoned crumbs; bake until crumbs are brown.

Lobster

To open a lobster: wipe lobster, break or sever small and large claws from the body. Separate tail from body portion by twisting and pulling at the same time. Remove meat from body portion carefully, picking edible portion from small bones. Reserve liver and coral if there is any; discard stomach, or "lady." Meat from the body of the lobster is the sweetest and tenderest, but is often thrown away because of the difficulty in removing it.

Break the large claws, or if the shell is tender, cut with scissors and remove meat whole.

Crush the tail shell and remove the meat in one piece. Cut entire length of the tail meat and remove the intestinal canal.

The small claws are attractive for garnishing, and should be reserved.

Creamed Lobster

1 pint lobster meat	salt, pepper, cayenne
4 tablespoons butter	2 cups cream
4 tablespoons flour	1 red pepper cut in ribbons
parsley	1 teaspoon lemon juice

Make a White Sauce of butter, flour, seasonings and cream. Parboil red pepper, add to sauce with lobster meat, reheat, and serve on rounds of buttered toast.

Scalloped Lobster

Use receipt for Creamed Lobster and bake in lobster shell, scallop shells, ramekins, or baking dishes, covered with buttered and seasoned cracker crumbs. Garnish with small lobster claws and parsley.

Deviled Lobster

Prepared same as Creamed Lobster, with addition of one teaspoon each of onion juice, Worcestershire sauce, mustard, few grains of cayenne and a few drops of Tabasco.

Remove the stomach and intestinal canal; reserve the liver or tomalley and coral, if there is any. Crack large claws and place on greased broiler, inserting skewers between the sides of the lobster to keep it open. Place in oven for twenty minutes, then broil over hot coals about five minutes. Serve immediately, plain or with Deviled Sauce.

CHAPTER IV

MEATS

MEAT is expensive; therefore every housekeeper should inform herself in regard to the different cuts in different creatures, and the prices of these cuts.

Various methods are employed in cooking meats; but this fact should be remembered, that all meat should be subjected to a high temperature for a short time, in order to sear the surface and shut in the juices, whatever method of cooking is used.

Tough meats should have long, slow cooking.

Dry meats, like the fillet, should be larded to give flavor.

As a rule, dark meats are more palatable and digestible if cooked rare, and white meats are considered better if thoroughly cooked.

Remove all meats from paper as soon as sent from the market. Set on plate and keep in ice chest or cool place until ready to use.

Never put meat in cold water, but always wipe with a damp cloth to remove any foreign matter, before cooking.

A description of the various meats will be found in the chapter on Marketing.

BEEF

Boiled Beef

The flank is one of the best pieces for boiling.

Select a five-pound piece; wipe; remove membrane, shape, stuff, tie, and skewer. Cover with cloth; place in kettle; cover with boiling water; bring to the boiling point, and cook just below the boiling point five or six hours, or until tender. Simmered beef would be a more correct term than boiled beef, but it is ordinarily known as boiled beef.

Season with salt one half hour before serving. Reserve liquor for making gravies and soups.

Boiled beef should have a rich, highly seasoned gravy served with it.

Braised Beef

An iron, or agate-ware kettle, with closely fitting cover, is absolutely necessary for perfectly cooking braised beef.

Select six pounds of round of beef, or any tough, inexpensive piece. Try out one cup salt pork cubes; add one cup each of chopped celery, carrot, onion and turnip. Wipe meat; sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Place meat on bed of vegetables and cook in covered kettle twenty minutes; add two pints hot water and cook slowly until tender, about four hours, turning meat and basting occasionally. It may be necessary to add more water, for there should be about a pint and a half when meat is cooked. Thicken gravy with four tablespoons flour, blended with two tablespoons butter, added twenty minutes before serving. A bouquet of sweet herbs may be added to improve the flavor.

Fillet of Beef

The tenderloin of beef is known as the fillet.

Trim into shape a fillet of beef weighing about four pounds, removing tendinous portions and veins. Tie and skewer into a pear-shaped piece. Lard top; sprinkle with salt and pepper, and dredge with flour. Cover the bottom of a small dripping pan with cubes of salt pork. Set trivet on top of pork, and meat on trivet. Bake from twenty to thirty minutes in hot oven, basting frequently.

Serve with gravy made from fat in pan, flour and hot water. Same as receipt for Brown Gravy, under Roast Beef.

Broiled Fillet of Beef

Cut slices about two inches thick from fillet. Shape in circles. Place on greased broiler and broil over hot coals from four to six minutes, turning every ten seconds. Serve on hot platter; garnish with slices of broiled tomato and brown Mushroom Sauce.

Broiled Fillets of Beef with Oysters

Broil steak according to receipt; place on hot platter; sprinkle with salt and pepper; cover with oysters; dot with butter; and bake in oven until edges of oysters curl. Serve immediately, garnished with parsley and lemon.

Sautéd Fillet of Beef

Sauté steak two minutes. Mix two tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, one half teaspoon salt, one quarter teaspoon mustard, one tablespoon melted butter, and one tablespoon chopped pimolas. Spread on both sides of steak, dip in bread crumbs, and sauté until crumbs are brown.

Corned Beef

Wash beef; place in kettle; cover with cold water; bring to the boiling point, then simmer until tender; allow thirty-five minutes for each pound. Cool partially in water in which it was cooked; place in square pan; apply pressure and serve cold.

Corned Beef Hash

Chop beef; add an equal amount of cold boiled potatoes, chopped; season with salt, pepper and a few drops of onion juice.

Melt one tablespoon butter in an iron frying pan; add beef and potatoes and sufficient milk or hot water to make the mixture quite soft. Cover frying pan and cook slowly until a brown crust is formed. Turn like an omelet on to a hot platter. Garnish with parsley.

Roast Beef

Pieces used for roasting are sirloin, rib, back of the rump, face of the rump, and upper round.

Eight to ten minutes a pound should be allowed for cooking the meat moderately rare.

Wipe the meat; place on rack in dripping pan; dredge meat and pan well with flour, then sprinkle well with salt and pepper.

Cook in hot oven for fifteen minutes, until flour is well browned. Reduce heat and continue roasting, basting every ten minutes until cooked.

Baste with fat tried out from the meat. If that is not sufficient, add beef suet, beef drippings, or butter.

Avoid the use of water in the pan, as by its use the meat is steamed rather than roasted.

Serve with brown gravy, made by browning four tablespoons of fat from the pan, adding four tablespoons flour. When brown, add one and one half cups water or beef stock and cook five minutes.

Yorkshire Pudding

2 cups milk
2 cups flour

$\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
4 eggs

Beat eggs; add flour and salt, gradually; continue beating. Add milk and continue beating five minutes. The mixture should be perfectly smooth. One half hour before meat is done, pour this mixture into dripping pan under meat and baste when basting meat, turning pan that pudding may be golden brown throughout.

Yorkshire pudding cooked in this way is considered by many to be too rich. A very good substitute is obtained by cooking in hissing hot gem pans, thirty minutes.

Serve pudding, cut in squares, on platter around beef.

Spiced Beef

Wash and wipe six pounds of any inexpensive piece of beef; cover with boiling water; bring to the boiling point, then simmer until meat is tender, adding, the last hour of cooking, one cup each of carrot and onions, a bouquet of sweet herbs tied in a bag, pepper, and one half tablespoon salt. Remove meat and reduce liquid to one and one half cups.

Shred meat, add liquid, and press in bread pan, packing closely. When cold serve in thin slices.

Stewed Beef

Cut beef taken from the round in small squares; cover with boiling water, and simmer until meat is tender, four or six hours. Season with salt and pepper one hour before serving. Remove meat and thicken liquid, allowing one and one half tablespoons of flour for each pint of liquid.

Pot Roast

Wipe a six-pound piece of beef; put into hot frying pan, and sear until brown; then lard the upper surface. Place in tightly covered kettle or bean pot; add one cup of water. Cook slowly in oven until meat is tender, keeping only enough water in kettle to prevent burning. When nearly done, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Serve with a Brown Gravy made with water in the pan.

Beef Ragout

Wipe three pounds from the flank or round. Cut into small cubes; dredge with salt, pepper and flour. Brown meat in hot frying pan, being careful to avoid burning.

Remove meat to kettle with close-fitting cover. Brown four tablespoons butter; add four tablespoons flour, and continue browning; add one and one half cups stock or water, one half cup each of carrot and onion; season with salt and pepper and simmer one and one half hours.

Broiled Beefsteak

Use a slice cut from the rump, round, or sirloin, cut one and one half inches to two and a half inches thick. Wipe meat; place on hot broiler, and broil over a clear fire from five to ten minutes, turning every ten seconds. Serve on a hot platter, spread with butter, and season with salt and pepper.

If there is a large amount of fat on the steak, be sure it is well browned before serving.

Beefsteak smothered in Onions

1 dozen small onions	salt
1 slice porterhouse steak, cut thick	pepper

Heat a frying pan hissing hot. Put in beefsteak, searing first on one side, then on the other; cook five minutes; season with salt and pepper; add onions which have been cooked one half hour in boiling salted water. Cover and simmer twenty or thirty minutes.

Remove steak to platter, spread with butter, and season with salt and pepper. Season onions with salt, pepper, and butter, and serve around steak.

Hamburg Steak à la Tartare

1 pound round steak	$\frac{1}{4}$ cup chopped onion
2 ounces beef suet	$\frac{1}{4}$ cup bread crumbs
salt and pepper

Put meat and suet through meat chopper; add finely chopped onion, and season with salt and pepper. Shape in balls; roll in crumbs, and broil over a clear fire, or pan-broil. Serve on hot platter with brown gravy, Tomato Sauce, or Spanish Sauce. Garnish with parsley.

VEAL

Roast Veal

Six pounds of veal taken from the leg, from the loin, or from the breast.

Skewer meat into shape; dredge with flour, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover top with slices of salt pork. Allow twenty minutes to the pound, bake in a hot oven, and baste every ten minutes with fat from the pan. If there is not sufficient fat in the pan, try out some pork on top of the stove and use that for basting.

Remove pork slices from top of meat one half hour before it is done, and brown.

A gravy may be made from the fat in the pan, same as Brown Gravy.

Roast Veal Stuffed

Select a shoulder of veal and have the bone removed; stuff with same stuffing used for Baked Fish, adding one cup chopped mushrooms. Sew up stuffed meat and roast same as Roast Veal.

Veal Fricassee

Cut meat in small pieces, sauté in melted butter. Cover meat with boiling water and cook slowly until meat is tender.

Melt four tablespoons butter or pork fat. When brown, add one fourth cup flour browned, and four cups of water in which veal was cooked. Season with salt, pepper, onion juice and lemon juice.

Just before serving add one fourth cup cream, or two tablespoons butter.

Serve veal in center of hot platter and surround with hot sauce. Garnish with parsley.

Dumplings may be served with this fricassee, in which case it is ordinarily called a stew.

Veal Cutlets

Choose only the tenderest of veal for cutlets. Cut meat from leg, shape either in individual cutlets or one large cutlet. Cover veal with oil and let it stand one hour. Drain; cover with boiling water and simmer until tender, having only sufficient water in stewpan to keep cutlets from burning. Remove from stewpan; cool; sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, dip in egg and crumbs, and sauté in pork fat or fry in deep fat.

Serve on hot platter with Brown Sauce, Tomato Sauce, or Mushroom Sauce.

Loin of Veal à la Jardinière

a 6-pound loin of veal	1 cauliflower
1 cup salt pork cubes	1 cup onion

Place veal in dripping pan; surround with pork fat, onion and carrot, and cook three hours. To the melted butter add flour. When well blended, add water in which bones were cooked.

Season with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Cook cauliflower, peas and potatoes separately in boiling salted water. Place cooked meat in center of platter, pour over sauce, and arrange vegetables in mounds around the meat.

Braised Veal

Use rule for Braised Beef, substituting six pounds of the shoulder of veal.

Veal Chops

Wipe chops taken from the rack of veal; make an incision, and put in a few drops of onion juice, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Dip in flour, egg and crumbs, and sauté in pork fat until tender. Serve on hot platter with Tomato Sauce and parsley.

MUTTON AND LAMB

Boiled Mutton

Roast Mutton

The leg, loin, saddle, and shoulder are used for roasting. Allow twelve minutes to the pound, if liked rare, fifteen if desired well done, basting every ten minutes.

To roast a leg of mutton, first remove the pink outer skin, as this contains the strong flavor. Never roast with the caul left on. The bone from the leg may be removed and the cavity stuffed and edges sewed; or the leg may be roasted without removing bone. In either case wipe meat, dredge with flour, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and place on rack in dripping pan. Dredge pan with flour, and if the mutton flavor is desired, place pieces of mutton fat in the pan, or salt pork may be substituted.

Braised Mutton

Remove the bone from the leg or fore quarter. Stuff and follow rule for Braised Beef.

Ragoût of Mutton

Use breast or fore quarter of mutton, or cold cooked mutton, and follow receipt for Beef Ragoût.

Roast Saddle of Mutton

The saddle is what the name implies—the back. In large pieces the tail is included.

Wipe meat; remove pink skin, kidneys and fat. Fold flanks inside and tie in shape. Place on rack; dredge meat and pan with flour, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cook in hot oven; allow ten minutes to the pound basting frequently.

Serve with Currant Jelly Sauce.

Crown Roast

Or Rack of Mutton. Prepare the loin as for French chops and arrange like a crown, rolling the loin backward. Tie securely. Cover each chop bone with thin strip of salt pork to prevent burning. Place on rack in dripping pan with a bowl in center of the crown to preserve its shape. Dredge with flour, sprinkle with salt and pepper, basting frequently, and allowing nine minutes to the pound for roasting.

Serve on hot platter, with potato balls, green peas, French fried potatoes, or purée of chestnuts in center of crown. Paper frills on chop bones and parsley around the base.

Breaded Lamb or Mutton Chops

Prepare loin or French chops as for broiling. Dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat. Drain on brown paper and serve.

Cool in water in which it was cooked. Take off the skin, sprinkle with sugar, and cover with seasoned cracker crumbs. Bake twenty to thirty minutes. Decorate with cloves, garnish with parsley and lemon, and serve hot or cold.

CHAPTER VI

CEREALS

Suggestions for Cooking Cereals

MIX the cereal very gradually with the amount of boiling salted water, and cook in double boiler until done. To hasten the cooking, cook in single boiler or saucepan for the first part of the time, stirring constantly to keep grain from sticking.

As a rule, cook steam-cooked cereals twice the time given on the package.

Coarse cereals, like rice and hominy, should be cooked in a large quantity of water, and stirred as little as possible.

Fine cereals, like wheatena, wheat germ, and others, are more easily kept from lumping by first mixing them with a small amount of cold water, and then adding to the boiling water.

Rolled Oats

1 cup rolled oats 1½ cups boiling water
1 teaspoon salt

Mix all ingredients, and cook in double boiler thirty minutes to one hour.

Old-fashioned Oatmeal

1 cup oatmeal 4 cups boiling water
1½ teaspoons salt

Mix ingredients, and cook in double boiler six to eight hours.

Boiled Hominy No. 1

1 cup hominy (fine) 4 cups boiling water
 1½ teaspoons salt

Cook all ingredients, stirring occasionally, for one hour.

Boiled Hominy No. 2

1 cup coarse hominy 8 cups boiling water
 2 teaspoons salt

Mix ingredients and cook six to eight hours, or, instead of boiling, cook in double boiler all day.

Cracked Wheat

1 cup wheat 5 cups boiling water
 1½ teaspoons salt

Mix ingredients and cook in double boiler from three to five hours.

Prepared Cereals

The receipts given on the packages for all prepared cereals may be followed, doubling the amount of time given.

Boiled Rice No. 2

1 cup rice 2½ cups boiling water
 1 teaspoon salt

Salt water, add rice a few grains at a time, so as not to stop the boiling, boil rapidly one half hour. When grains are tender, drain in colander, and pour boiling water over rice to wash starch from grains. Serve immediately.

Steamed Rice

1 cup rice 2½ cups boiling water
 1 teaspoon salt

Place rice in earthen dish, add salt and boiling water, and steam two to three hours. Cooked in this way, every grain should be separate.

Corn Meal Mush

1 cup corn meal 4 cups boiling water
 1½ teaspoons salt

Salt water, add corn meal, a little at a time, until all is used, boil five minutes, and cook in double boiler three hours.

Sautéd or Fried Corn Meal Mush

1 cup corn meal 4 cups boiling water
 ½ cup white flour 2 teaspoons salt

Cook in the same way as Corn Meal Mush, pour while hot into greased bread pan or baking powder box. When cold, slice and sauté in pork fat, first on one side and then on the other; or fry in deep fat.

EGGS

A FRESH egg sinks when immersed in water. A stale egg, owing to evaporation which has taken place through the pores of the shell, floats.

Soft-cooked Eggs No. 1

Place eggs in saucepan, cover with boiling water, and let them stand in saucepan on the back of the range three minutes; in this way the white and the yolk are slightly coagulated.

Soft-cooked Eggs No. 2

Fill saucepan one half full of boiling water; when boiling violently, place eggs in gently with a tablespoon; when water bubbles, remove saucepan from fire and let the eggs remain in water five minutes. Eggs cooked in this way have the albumen delicately hardened throughout.

Soft-cooked Eggs No. 3

Place eggs in saucepan, cover with cold water, bring to the boiling point, when they will be soft-cooked.

Hard-cooked Eggs

Cover eggs with boiling water and cook below the boiling point for forty minutes. Remove from pan, cover with cold water, and wipe before serving.

Baked Eggs

Butter baking dish or platter, or individual ramekin dishes. Break each egg into a cup and drop into baking dish, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and bake in a moderate oven—five minutes for soft-cooked and ten for hard-cooked. Eggs are more delicately cooked if dish is placed in a pan of hot water in the oven, and water kept below the boiling point during cooking.

Chopped red or green pepper sprinkled over top of baked eggs is delicious.

Poached Eggs

Break eggs in cup; butter muffin rings. Place in shallow pan and cover with boiling water. Allow two teaspoons of salt to each pint of water. Drop eggs into rings, and cook from five to eight minutes, keeping water below the boiling point during cooking.

Remove the eggs on a buttered skimmer or pancake turner, and place on a round of buttered toast, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and garnish with parsley.

Fluffed Eggs

Beat the white until stiff; add a few grains of salt; place in a buttered ramekin dish or saucer; put a piece of butter in center of white, and place unbroken yolk on top. Set the egg dish in pan of boiling water; cover and cook three minutes. Serve immediately.

Poached Eggs à la Française

Fill a saucepan three fourths full of boiling water; add salt and vinegar, stir the boiling water vigorously with a spoon. Break egg in cup and drop deftly into eddy formed by swift stirring of water. When white is firm, remove with buttered skimmer, trim, and serve.

Poached Egg in Tomato

Cut a piece from the stem end of a tomato; remove pulp; set in ramekin dish; sprinkle with salt and pepper, drop egg into tomato cup; cover with buttered paper. Set in a pan of water and bake in a moderate oven until firm.

Scrambled Eggs No. 1

4 eggs	$\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon pepper
4 tablespoons milk or cream	1 teaspoon chopped parsley
$\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt	2 tablespoons butter

Beat egg slightly, enough to blend yolks and whites; add seasonings, parsley and milk. Melt butter in frying pan, add egg mixture, and cook slowly, lifting carefully with a spoon to keep mixture uniformly delicate.

Scrambled Eggs No. 2

Prepare the same as Scrambled Eggs No. 1, beating yolks and whites separately. Many persons have better success scrambling eggs in a double boiler instead of in a frying pan.

Scrambled eggs can be varied in appearance and flavor by adding various chopped meats, condiments, vegetables, cheese, or mushrooms.

Fried Eggs

Melt butter, bacon fat or pork fat in frying pan; when it bubbles, turn in egg, which has been previously broken into a cup; when white is set, baste with liquid fat. If desired hard, turn and cook on both sides.

Omelet

2 eggs	$\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons hot water or hot milk	1 tablespoon butter

Beat eggs well; add salt and milk. Melt butter in frying pan; add egg mixture; shake pan vigorously until egg begins to brown on under side; then let it stand until golden brown, on part of range where it will not burn. If moist on top, place in oven to dry. Separate omelet from sides of pan with knife, and beginning at side near the handle, roll omelet slowly and carefully into the shape of a jelly roll; turn on to a hot platter, garnish, and serve.

Omelets may be varied in the following ways:—

Bacon Omelet, by adding finely chopped cooked bacon before folding.

Cheese Omelet, by adding grated cheese before folding.

Creamed Salt Fish Omelet, by combining creamed salt fish and finely chopped red pepper, and adding to omelet before folding.

Kidney Omelet, by adding stewed kidneys, highly seasoned.

Mushroom Omelet, by adding mushrooms.

And continuing through a multiplicity of combinations.

Foamy Omelet

Same ingredients as for first omelet, beating yolks and whites separately and combining ingredients in a way to produce a foamy appearance before pouring into omelet pan.

Creamy Omelet

4 eggs	$\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon pepper
$\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt	2 tablespoons flour
$\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk	1 tablespoon butter

Melt butter; add flour, milk, and yolks of eggs, beaten until lemon-colored and thick. Beat whites until stiff, cut, and fold into first mixture; add seasonings; pour into buttered pan, and cook as first omelet. Turn on to a hot platter; garnish with White Sauce, and parsley.

NOTE.— For a sweet omelet add one fourth cup sugar to the yolks of eggs of above omelet.

CHAPTER XIV

CAKE AND COOKIES; FROSTINGS AND FILLINGS

Suggestions for making and baking Cake

- 1st. Get all materials needed together.
- 2d. Attend to fire, making sure, if it is a coal fire, that there is sufficient coal to last through the baking.
- 3d. Measure all ingredients with same cup, dry ones first.
- 4th. Mix and sift all dry ingredients except sugar; if soda is used, sift through a very fine sieve before sifting with other ingredients.

Mixing Butter Cakes

Cream Butter.—Cream butter, that is, beat it with a spoon until it is of a creamy consistency; then add sugar very gradually; when well blended, add yolks of eggs which have been beaten with a Dover egg beater until lemon-colored and thick.

When the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, add sifted dry ingredients alternately with the milk. When all milk and flour have been used, beat well; then cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Pour into buttered and papered pan, having mixture a little higher on the sides than in the middle.

Cutting and Folding.—Cut through and through the mixture with a knife or side of a wooden spoon, fold by turning the spoon completely over, thereby blending the materials without breaking the air bubbles. Never stir or beat after cutting and folding.

Mixing Sponge Cake

Beat yolks of eggs until lemon-colored and thick; add sugar and continue beating; add flour; when well blended, cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Pour into buttered and papered pan; bake in a round pan with a tube in the center.

Baking Cake

For baking both sponge and butter cakes divide the time into quarters. The first quarter, the cake should rise; the second quarter, form a crust and begin to brown; third quarter, continue browning; and fourth quarter, finish browning and shrink from the pan. When baked, this may be determined by pressing crust with the finger; if a depression is left the cake is not done; if the cake springs back and leaves no depression, it is done. Take from oven, invert on a cake cooler, remove paper, turn right-side up and cool. When cold, frost.

Time for baking Cake

Thin cakes and individual cakes require from twelve to fifteen minutes to bake; loaf cakes from thirty to sixty minutes according to size.

If the cake rises unevenly, the mixture is too thick or the oven is too hot.

If the oven seems too hot, when the cake is ready for the oven, put the cake in the oven, but do not close the oven door for the first five or ten minutes of baking.

To grease Tins

Warm pans slightly; brush with melted lard, suet, or clarified butter; cover bottom of pan only with tissue paper, then grease the paper.

Lard or suet is less apt to brown than butter, but many object to their use; if so, clarify the butter, by melting butter, letting stand until salt has settled to the bottom, then pouring off the liquid butter.

CHAPTER XVFROZEN DISHES*FROZEN DESSERTS*Directions for Freezing

SELECT a reliable freezer and one which runs easily. Keep the gearing well oiled.

Adjust the freezing can in the freezer, making sure that all parts fit and that the crank turns readily. Place ice in bag made of ticking or strong sacking, and with a wooden mallet, pound until very fine. Surround the freezing can with ice and rock salt, using three measures of ice and one of salt, for ice cream and sherbets; two measures of ice and one of salt for sorbets, frappés, etc.; equal measures of ice and of salt for molding and for freezing mousses, bombes, and parfais.

For freezing ice cream, when the freezing can is cold, pour in mixture to be frozen, let stand five minutes, then turn the crank slowly for eight or ten minutes, then more rapidly until mixture is frozen. Remove dasher, scrape cream from sides of freezing can to the middle and press down so as to have the cream one solid mass; let stand to season, or if to be molded, pack in the mold.

A one-pound baking powder can makes an excellent mold if one has no brick mold.

Directions for Molding

Have the mold chilled; press the frozen mixture well into the sides and bottom of mold, packing solidly until overflowing; put on cover, making sure that it fits securely; if in doubt, brush with lard or butter. Tie on cover and immerse in ice and salt, using equal parts of each; let stand one to three hours, depending upon degree of hardness desired. Mousses and parfaits are put directly into the mold, filled to overflowing, covered according to directions, and allowed to stand from four to six hours in ice and salt.

Frozen desserts are divided into:—

Philadelphia ice cream, which is cream sweetened, flavored, and stirred in freezer-while freezing; plain ice cream, a custard of different degrees of richness, with or without cream, and stirred while freezing.

Mousses, parfaits and biscuits are made with and without eggs, with beaten or whipped cream, and frozen without stirring.

Bombes are combinations of ice cream and sherbet, or sherbet and charlotte russe mixture.

CHAPTER XVIIFRUITS AND NUTS AND CANDY*Fruits and Nuts

FRUIT is especially wholesome, although not nutritious. The best time to eat fruit is in the morning. Most fruits are improved in flavor by being chilled.

A dish of different fruits attractively arranged makes a very acceptable center piece.

To prepare Fruit for the Table

Apples should be washed and wiped dry. Berries should be looked over very carefully, and, if dirty, washed by putting in a colander and allowing cold water to run gently over them, or place the colander in a bowl of cold water and raise up and down several times, then drain thoroughly and chill before serving.

Cherries should be looked over, and served with their stems on.

Bananas should be wiped and chilled.

Currants should be washed and drained, and served on the stem.

Figs, if the dried ones, should be washed, drained, and chilled.

Grape fruit should be cut in halves, the pulp loosened from the skin, and the pith cut out, then chilled; it may be served plain, or sugar and wine may be poured over it just before chilling. Serve one half grape fruit to each person.

Grapes should be washed if dirty, but the bloom is then lost ; if picked on one's own vines, it may not be necessary to wash them ; but when bought in the market, it is better to wash and drain, and chill them.

Peaches and plums should be wiped with a soft cloth, and chilled before serving.

Quinces are never served raw.

Strawberries are often served with their hulls on around a mound of sugar ; but if they are to be served with sugar and cream, of course they must be hulled and chilled.

Oranges may be chilled and served in the natural state ; or prepared the same as grape fruit, and one half served to each person ; or peeled and the sections almost, but not quite, separated ; or the orange may be cut in the shape of a basket, the pulp removed, the membrane cut off, and the basket refilled with the pulp, which may be sweetened or not.

Pineapples may be served in various ways ; perhaps the most popular way is to cut off a slice from the top of the pineapple, then scoop out the center with a fork, and return pulp to pineapple, put on cover, chill, and serve.

Pineapples may be cut in slices, the outer skin be removed, and the tough pith taken out, then serve one or two slices to each person.

If the pineapples are not fully ripe, it is better to remove the skin, pull the pulp in pieces with a fork, then cover with sugar, and chill over night.

Pears should be carefully wiped and chilled before serving.

Melons should be thoroughly chilled. Cantaloupes should be cut in halves, have the seeds removed, and be served one half to a person. Watermelons should be cut in halves, then each half cut in pie-shaped pieces ; serve one piece to a person.

Nuts are ordinarily served only at dinner. Hard-shelled nuts should be cracked, served in the shell, or without the shell.

Almonds are cracked, and a portion of the shell discarded, or they may be blanched and salted, and served with the bonbons.

Pecans, filberts, peanuts and walnuts are treated in the same way as almonds.

Castañas or Brazilian nuts are cracked and served in the shell.

CHAPTER XVIII

PRESERVING

CANNING AND PRESERVING

CANNED fruits are now more popular with most people than preserved fruits.

The expense in preparing them is less, and the natural flavor is retained.

To prepare fruit for canning, look over carefully, reject imperfect fruit, and be sure that the fruit is clean.

The fruit may be cooked in a saucepan with just enough sugar to make it palatable and water to keep the fruit from burning, and transferred to sterile jars; or it may be put into sterile jars in the first place, and cooked by steam,—the latter method preserves the color and flavor better.

To sterilize jars, put jars into cold water, bring water to the boiling point, and boil ten minutes; fill jars with cooked fruit, and pour in sirup to overflowing; adjust rubbers and covers. Invert and let stand on folded cloth until cold; if there are no air bubbles, place jars in a cool dark closet to keep. If air bubbles are present, take off cover, reheat, and add more hot sirup and proceed as before.

Canned Apples

4 pounds apples	2 pints water
1 pound sugar	juice and rind of 2 lemons

Pare and core the apples; cover with cold water. Boil sugar and water five minutes; add apples and simmer until tender; add lemon juice and rind; place apples in sterilized jars; fill to overflowing with sirup; adjust rubbers and covers; set in a cool place until cool then keep in dark dry closet.

Canned Apples and Pineapple

4 pounds apples	2 pounds sugar
4 pounds pineapple	2 pints water
	rind of 4 lemons

Pare, core, and cut the apples in rings. Cut pineapple in slices, remove skin and eyes, and cut pulp into squares, being careful to reject the core. Boil sugar and water five minutes; add pineapple; cook until tender; then cook apples until tender; add lemon rind; fill jars which have been sterilized with apple and pineapple, adjust rings, fill jars with sirup, adjust covers, seal.

-------------------	----------------

Wash, stem, and cover currants with sugar; let stand in preserving kettle over night. Cook slowly until boiling point is reached, skim. fill sterilized jars, and seal.

CHAPTER XIX

CHAFING DISH DELICACIES

THE chafing dish is composed of the blazer and hot water pan, set in a standard with a small lamp underneath. Some lamps have an electric attachment, but alcohol is the fuel most used. The best alcohol is the most satisfactory, although many use wood alcohol.

Every kind of dish which is usually prepared in a saucepan or double boiler can be made in the chafing dish, but ordinarily oyster, mushroom, fish, egg, and cheese dishes are the ones most popular.

When preparing for a chafing dish supper, arrange the chafing dish on a tray, have the lamp filled, and matches at hand. A wooden spoon or regular chafing dish spoon and a wire whisk are convenient and really necessary utensils. It is well to have all the ingredients measured and neatly arranged on a tray. If butter is to be used, butter balls, each representing a tablespoon, are a convenient and attractive way in which to serve it.

If toast is to be used, have the bread cut in small rounds or triangles and toasted a golden brown. It should be kept hot until ready to be used.

Light the lamp and have the water boiling before the supper is announced, then the compounding of the dish may be done quickly.

Salted Almonds

Heat one tablespoon olive oil in chafing dish; add one cup blanched and dried almonds. Stir until evenly colored. Drain and sprinkle with salt.

Deviled Almonds

READ THIS

HOW TO USE A COOK BOOK

Read it thoroughly, especially the introductions to chapters and the whole of Part I, where the sections on Marketing, Methods of Cooking, and Just How will be helpful to everybody and the other sections useful for special purposes. It is important to know the difference between frying and sautéing and between boiling and simmering; how to clarify fat; how to egg and crumb, and many other things that are treated in Part I and cannot be repeated in the receipts.

At the beginning of the chapter on Cereals, for instance, will be found general directions for their preparation for which there is no room in each receipt, and the same is true of the section on Pastry under Desserts and the chapters on Meats, Fish, Vegetables, Sandwiches, Frozen Desserts, etc.

Don't confine your use of a cook book to merely consulting an individual receipt as it is wanted.

The Index is a valuable part of the book and use of it should be made always to save searching. Most receipts are entered there twice. For instance, Green Turtle Soup will be found under "Soups" and also under "Green" and Dutch Apple Cake will be found under "Cakes" and under "Dutch."

The Glossary, page 387, will give definitions of most of the French words and technical terms used in the book.

The Bibliography, page 385, will furnish the names of thirty or more books that will be useful to those who want a small library on culinary science. Or any one of them can be ordered of the nearest bookseller if the title and author's name is furnished. Lowney's Cook Book is the only book on sale by The Walter M. Lowney Company.

Follow the Receipts exactly. Every rule in Lowney's Cook Book has been tried at least twice for this book in order to insure accuracy of measurements. You will get the best results by using the materials carefully measured just as prescribed in the receipts. The table of weights and measures on page 33 will be helpful. The only possible excuse for departing from the quantities called for is where you suspect your materials to be of less strength than pure materials should be.

The rules for length of time in cooking should also be carefully observed.

Some kitchens do not contain all the condiments, etc., called for in the book. We can only say that you will not be able to get such delicious, satisfying results without them; but you may get fair results, especially if you use good judgment and have cultivated your skill in making dishes taste right. But nothing will take the place of the spice bag in making soups or of proper seasoning in a host of other dishes.

THE GROWTH AND PREPARATION OF COCOA

COCOA and chocolate are the roasted and ground product of the beans of a delicate tropical tree, usually grown in the shade of larger and hardier trees and known as "Theobroma Cacao." This name was given to it by the distinguished botanist, Linnæus, out of compliment to its delicious flavor and nutritious qualities,—the word meaning "the food of the gods." The beans are obtained from large pods shaped somewhat like cucumbers, which grow on the trunk and lower branches of this tree.

Cocoa has nothing whatever to do with the cocoanut, the fruit of a variety of palm tree; nor with coca, a nerve tonic derived from a variety of South American flax; nor with cocaine, a dangerous anæsthetic.

Cocoa differs from chocolate only because a portion of the cocoa butter has been pressed out of cocoa; whereas chocolate retains the full amount of this remarkable vegetable fat, which is extremely nutritious and has the quality of never becoming rancid. To the latter fact cocoa butter owes its popularity as a cosmetic.

Chocolate had been known to the Aztecs and had been a favorite drink with them—and especially with their king, Montezuma—long before the conquest of Mexico by Cortez, who was the first to introduce it into Europe.

The Spaniards, desiring to keep a good thing to themselves, were very secretive about the new beverage and its preparation, and this attitude accounts for the remarkable slowness with which it became known to Northern Europe. Moreover, its price was almost prohibitive in those days. It took two centuries for it to become really known in London, and it is only in modern times that cultivation and improved methods have brought it into general consumption at a low price. When we consider its nutritive value as a food in addition to its delicious flavor as a beverage, cocoa is the cheapest beverage there is. Chocolate has several times the value of beef per pound and the same is true in only a slightly less degree of cocoa; and cocoa has the added advantage of being so very digestible that it is suited for the use of children and invalids.

After the pods containing the beans are collected, they are cut open, and the beans—some twenty-five or more to each pod—are scooped out, together with a small amount of the pulp surrounding them and are very slightly fermented in tanks or pits. This process of fermentation largely determines the flavor and their selling value.

After being dried thoroughly in the sun they are packed in bags and shipped to the northern markets. Some of the highest quality of beans come from Venezuela, Trinidad and Ecuador, but they are cultivated also in many of the West India islands, in tropical South America, the west coast of Africa, Ceylon, Java, and even in some of the islands of the Pacific.

The process of manufacture begins with roasting the beans to just the right degree to produce the best flavor, after blending the different varieties so as to insure a fullness and richness of taste. These two processes are most important in determining the quality of cocoa. The roasted beans are placed in a crusher and the shells are winnowed out, leaving the nibs. The shells are either thrown away, as we treat them, or are sold for a trifle to make a beverage which distantly resembles cocoa at a great cost of fuel.

The nibs are ground in large mills and immediately turn to a heavy liquid like molasses, owing to 50% of the beans being vegetable fat. In making cocoa, this liquid is poured into hydraulic presses and a considerable part of the cocoa butter pressed out. The dry cakes of powder remaining are pulverized, bolted and packed in cans for sale.

To make chocolate, the liquid above mentioned is molded in pans without abstraction of any cocoa butter and without the addition of any flavor or sugar. These cakes are the "Premium Chocolate" used in cooking, which used to be known as "Bitter Chocolate" because of its being unsweetened.

Milk Chocolate and Vanilla Sweet Chocolate, for eating purposes, are sweetened before being molded, and in the case of Lowney's Milk Chocolate, has the richest cream from our own blooded Jersey cows added to it. The Vanilla Sweet Chocolate is sweetened and flavored with vanilla beans of the best quality, which we buy and grind ourselves.

The growth of the consumption of cocoa in its powdered form of recent years has been remarkable. It is superseding the old method of boiling for hours the cracked cocoa nibs at a great cost of fuel and with far less satisfactory results both as to flavor and as to the nutritive qualities of the cocoa.

Cocoa and chocolate differ from tea and coffee because they hold in solution one of the most nutritious foods known to man; whereas tea and coffee are simply infusions, that is to say, hot water plus the flavor, and have no nutritive value whatever except so far as they are mixed with sugar and cream.

Moreover, besides being a food, cocoa and chocolate differ from tea and coffee in giving the least possible stimulus, if any, to the nerves, and consequently are followed by the slightest, if any, reaction. Theobromin, the alkaloid which forms the essential flavor of cocoa and chocolate, although very similar chemically to the alkaloids, thein and caffeine, which are the natural flavoring elements of tea and coffee, differs from them in not being an excitant to the nerves.

You should remember in using cocoa and chocolate as beverages that they are strong foods and consequently just so much less other food should be taken when cocoa is used rather than other beverages. Otherwise, a case of overeating may ensue without your knowing what the matter is.

Many persons use hot beverages for two chief purposes: first, to wash their food down and save themselves the trouble of thorough mastication; and second, to get something hot into the stomach and revive the nerves. Such persons should remember that cocoa and chocolate are like soups in their nutritive value and not to be used like water, tea, or coffee.

Cocoa or chocolate with bread would be a sufficiently nutritive diet to prolong life indefinitely. In fact one woman in Martinique lived on chocolate exclusively for many years. This was possible because it contains all of the elements necessary to sustain human life. Under these circumstances, we urge that cocoa and chocolate shall be considered and treated as foods, as well as most delicious drinks.

For those who care for a scientific analysis of the cocoa bean, we will add the approximate figures of one chemist;

Water	3 %
Protein	15 %
Fat	50 %
Starch	13 %
Other non-nitrogenous matter	11½ %
Woody fiber	3 %
Ash	4 %

Based on such analyses as these, food experts accord to chocolate and cocoa a very high food value as producers of energy and heat. The ratio of fat and protein is so fortunately balanced to the needs of the human system that all experts agree on its being one of the most nutritious of known foods, and it is on this fact that we base our claim that it is cheap as a beverage, as well as most delicious. It has a fine delicate flavor of the tropics of which one never tires and is wholesome, strengthening, and harmless. It is especially suited to children, for whom it should be the only hot beverage provided.

Lowney's Milk Chocolate is a delicious confection and a most nourishing food. It is made of pure chocolate, the finest cream from our own herd of blooded Jersey cows, and pure vanilla, sweetened with the best granulated sugar, powdered in our own factory.

IT IS GOOD FOR SCHOOL LUNCHES, PICNICS, AND AFTER MEALS

The Reason this chocolate has a more refined flavor than others, is owing to the quality of the cocoa beans and the costly vanilla beans used. Price is a secondary consideration in buying the materials for this eating chocolate. The main thing is to make it perfect. Each of the materials is used as Mother Nature grew them. There is no "treatment" nor adulteration of any kind whatever.

THAT IS WHY THE LOWNEY PRODUCTS ARE SO DIGESTIBLE

Lowney's "Always Ready" Sweet Cocoa Powder has a rich chocolate flavor—especially when boiled five minutes—for drinking, and besides makes the simplest and best icing for cake, by simply pouring hot water over it. It is delicious as flavoring for ice cream.

IF YOUR DEALER DOES NOT KEEP IT, ASK HIM TO GET IT FOR YOU

Lowney's Premium Chocolate goes further than other cooking chocolates, because it is absolutely pure, and is made of the choicest and highest-priced cocoa beans, especially selected and blended. It is what used to be called "bitter chocolate," because it is unsweetened. It is very economical to use in cooking, because every atom of it is the choicest chocolate, — no adulteration in Lowney's.
