PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

It has been the aim of the author, in the following pages to point out as clearly as the limits of the work permitted, the nature of the different kinds of aliment provided by the wise and benevolent Creator for the sustenance of His rational creatures, and to show the best methods of preparation now understood.

Foreigners say that our climate is unhealthy; that the Americans have, generally, thin forms, sallow complexions and bad teeth.

Is it not most likely that those defects are incurred, in part if not wholly, because the diet and modes of living are unsuitable to the climate, and consequently to the health of the people?

Could public attention be drawn to this important subject sufficiently to have a reform in a few points—such as using animal food to excess, eating hot bread, and swallowing our meals with steam-engine rapidity, the question of climate might more easily be settled.

This little work is intended to show the rich how they may preserve their health and yet enjoy the bounties of Providence; and teach the poor that frugal management which will make their homes the abode of comfort. Such rational and Christian views of domestic economy have never before been enforced in a treatise on house-keeping; and the writer flatters herself that this will be well received. The book has been several years in contemplation; various circumstances have retarded the publication, but the times seemed now to call for its appearance. May it do good, is the sincere wish of the

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

The first edition of the Good Housekeeper, (2000 copies) was neally disposed of in the space of a month after its publication, and large orders for the work have been since received. These marks of public approbation, show that our system of domestic management meets the wants and wishes of the community. This was our aim; to prepare a Manual of Cookery which should, by its cheapness be accessible to every family, and by its clearness, simplicity and adaptation to the human constitution and tastes of civilized life, be practical for all classes—for the rich and poor, the dweller in the city and the country household.

By crowding the text, a few more receipts have been given in this edition, chiefly in relation to preserving meats and preparing gravies, mixed spices and flavored vinegars. These are selected from "The Cook and Housewives' Manual," a work ostensibly by "Mrs Margaret Dods," but said to have been prepared by Sir Walter Scott. The opening chapters, which give a graphic and most humorous description of the "Cleikum Club," their experiments in cookery and lectures on culinary matters, bear internal evidence of the style of the great novelist. His visit to Paris seems to have opened a new world of tastes to his palate, and his admiration of French cookery is very apparent. He echoes the sentiment of Dr King with great warmth:

"Muse, sing the man that did to Paris go,
That he might taste their soups, and sauces know."

It is generally admitted that the French excel in the economy of their cooking. By studying the appropriate flavors for every dish, they contrive to dress all the broken pieces of meats and make a variety of dishes from vegetables at a small expense.

Next to the knowledge of the differences in the human constitution, and the nature of the food proper for man, this study of flavors and art of re-cooking to advantage is to be prized by the good houskeeper. Every family who has a garden spot should cultivate those vegetables and herbs which are requisite for seasoning—horse-radish, onions, celery, mustard, capsicum, (red These, if rightly prepared, will be sufficient for all common culinary purposes, and a little care and study will enable the housemanner.

Bear in mind that, in preparing food, three things are to be united, the promotion of health, the study of economy, and the gratification of taste.
