ETTES REFUSE THE EATS; WANT LIBERTY OR DEATH

LONDON, July 16.—Eminent suffragettes, made a public demand today upon the British government, to withdraw the bill for the new law, which would be unjustly imposed, and that she be held responsible for the action of the suffragettes who turned the residence of Mr. W. H. Lever, at Harwick, in W. H. Lever, the late parliament and the present one, were arrested, the law providing $100,000. Two notes were found about the time. One addressed to King George, read: "Wake up, government, and give us a reason to be loyal. That is all."

The other addressed to Lord Curzon, read: "If you had been as loyal to us as Lord Curzon is to the king, this never would have happened."

Seventeen of the women were hurt at London, and fifteen in New Street, where Mrs. Sylvia Pankhurst, daughter of Emma Pankhurst, and Julia Emerson, the American suffragette, were given prison terms.

When Mrs. Pankhurst was arrested for speaking on the streets she fiercely resisted the police.

The court demanded that Mrs. Pankhurst give bond for good behavior. She flatly refused. A three month sentence was then imposed.

"I won't stay in jail," she screamed, "and you cannot keep me there. I will start a hunger strike."

Mrs. Emerson was sentenced to one month's imprisonment at hard labor. She was convicted of resisting an officer.
