MISS RICHARDS' TALKS

Interest Her Hearers in Finance and President's Personality.

At her fortnightly talk on "Current Topics" at Delmonico's, in New York, on Friday last, Miss Janet Richards found that her 300 hearers were most interested in the financial situation and the relation of the President to the roads. In fact, Miss Richards avers that nothing seems to interest her audiences so much, in the seven cities where she lectures, as the personality of the President and his attitude toward great public questions.

In her talk to-day at Scottish Rite Hall, at 11 a. m., Miss Richards will attempt to present the point of view of the press and the people of New York regarding the sharp decline in the stock markets of last week, and the speculation as to the causes and where to place the responsibility.

PHI SIGMA KAPPAS BANQUET.

Alumni from Seven Chapters Attend Event at Rauscher's.

Lambda Chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa, George Washington University, gave its annual banquet Saturday evening, March 16, at Rauscher's. It was in all ways the most successful one which the local body has ever given. Alumni from seven chapters were present, and letters were received from all the affiliated chapters wishing Lambda great success in the next year.

The programme proper for the evening was opened by the minstrel troupe, which was composed entirely of members of the local chapter, and whose unexpected vocal talents were an agreeable surprise. Those composing the troupe were Mezers, McLean, Boyd, Couden, Perkins, Swenerton, Bullough, George, and T. V. Sullivan.

The toastmaster, H. E. Stonebraker, briefly reviewed the year which had intervened since the last gathering, and alluded in rosy colors to the prospects for the future.

The set speeches for the evening were: "The Graduate Clubs," by T. V. Sullivan, being a review of the work and purpose of that body; "Benevolent Assimilation," by E. H. Andrews, in which the frailties and weaknesses of certain brothers were brought to mind, and "Prospect and Retrospect," by Edward Wyman.

Those present were: C. C. Perkins, W. L. Tibbets, W. T. Peake, C. H. Griffin, C. J. Mess, D. H. McLean, W. H. Littlepage, J. E. Law, F. A. Law, C. Fox, Dr. A. P. King, A. Kambie, H. C. Gibson, H. R. George, H. D. Woodruff, F. D. Couden, F. A. Collins, A. L. Clothier, H. H. Byrne, G. V. N. Bullough, W. A. Boyd, C. M. Booth, Bayard Wyman, M. E. Woodward, F. Woodward, F. Van Vleet, H. W. Tobias, H. W. Swenerton, F. P. Sullivan, Joseph Sullivan, T. V. Sullivan, H. E. Stonebraker, Dr. D. K. Shute, Joseph Sagmeister, C. O. Ruedy, H. H. Schneider, G. S. Barnhart, and E. H. Andrews.

POKES FUN AT PRESIDENT

Dr. Croftut Sarcastic About Executive's Versatility.

Speaker at Secular League Meeting Also Talks Disparagingly of New York Clergymen.

"New Zealand and Its Government" was the theme of an address delivered by the Rev. Alexander Kent to the members of the Secular League at the Pythian Temple yesterday afternoon.

Prior to Dr. Kent's discourse, Dr. W. A. Croftut spoke of the visit of a number of New York clergymen to the White House last week, and of their informing the President of the decline of religion and the rise of atheism in that city, and enlisting his aid. Dr. Croftut stated he was glad the people of New York were getting rid of some of their irrational ideas, but he said that it was probably due to the falling off of the church revenues that bothered the reverend gentlemen more than the salvation of souls.

"That's about the best thing they could do; to call on the President. The man in the White House who's got the universe by the tail can do any and everything for the benefit of the human race if it can be accomplished by the power of his lungs. I am glad the President has a thousand times more confidence in himself than he has in the Almighty, and I think we may be duly grateful that we have a man who can accomplish anything with a frown or a proclamation. The President, I have no doubt, will issue a special message on the subject, and remedy the trouble and reestablish religion in New York to its proper place."

"One of the women of the league said that more benefit would accrue to humanity if the churches would turn over their collections to the poor and needy, and instead of holding service, close the church doors."

Dr. Kent spoke at length on the problem of public ownership in New Zealand, which he said was the only country where private ownership threatened to become a monopoly. He explained the system of the sale of land to small owners. The tax system, relations between employer and employe, the schools, the penal institutions, life and fire insurance, telegraphs and telephones—in short, every phase of public life and government was depicted by the speaker in a rosy light. Dr. Kent expressed the hope that this country should take lessons from New Zealand in the amelioration of the condition of the laboring class and society in general.

THIRTY-FOUR YEARS OLD.

Luther Place Memorial Church Celebrates Its Anniversary.

Luther Place Memorial Church celebrated its thirty-fourth anniversary yesterday, and the historic house of worship was crowded at the morning and evening services with members of the church and visitors from other churches. The venerable pastor of the church, the Rev. Dr. Butler, at the 11 o'clock service delivered his annual sermon on the "Foundation of the Church," restricting himself to the religious and dogmatic aspect thereof. He received the congratulations of the congregation at the conclusion of the services.

The Luther Place Church was organized in the chapel March 12, 1873, with forty-eight members, ten of whom are yet on its membership of the church. They are: George Ryneel, Jr., Mrs. A. E. Butler, J. W. Sterner, Mrs. Rosa Leves, W. H. Finckel, Mrs. J. Lillie Schreiner, Mrs. J. S. Crocker, Mrs. M. A. E. Woodworth, Mrs. Susan Schreiner, and Miss Helen Schreiner. The present membership of the church is 320. The church building, with the towers unfinished, was dedicated in June, 1874. The Luther Statue was unveiled in 1884. The edifice was partly destroyed by fire in January, 1904. Repairs and improvements were immediately made at a cost of $50,000, and the church rededicated in January, 1905, with addresses by the Rev. George W. Miller and President Roosevelt.

During passion week the following services will be held: Palm Sunday, March 24, "Coming of the King," Tuesday, March 25, 7:45 p. m., "Bethany to Jerusalem;" Wednesday, March 27, "Upper Room;" Thursday, March 28, "Gethsemane;" Good Friday, 11 a. m., "Crucifixion;" Easter, 11 a. m., "The Empty Sepulcher;" 5 p. m., Children's Easter service.

STRIKING NEW NOVEL

"The Conquest," by Well-known Washington Lady.

WIFELY WINNING OF SENATOR

Story of a Millionaire Who Soon Grows Accustomed to the Ways of the Capital—His Wife Follows Him and Beats Him on His Own Social Grounds—Author Related to Lees.

"The Conquest," by Daisy Fitzhugh Ayres (The Neale Publishing Company: Washington and New York), is the latest novel dealing with life at the National Capital, written by a Washingtonian.

Mrs. Ayres has made much out of a subject not new and a plot not wholly original. The book, however, tempts to dramatic interest from the opening to the closing chapter. It abounds in bits of description that are brilliant. Whether designedly or for the purpose of not putting too great a demand upon her resources of plot and counterplot, Mrs. Ayres has confined nearly the whole action of her story to three or four characters, in limiting some of whom she has displayed an insight into certain phases of life that is little short of genius. Her men—only two of them—are types that the experienced Washingtonian will recognize as not overdrawn. Her women—only two of them, too—are made to speak and deport themselves in ways that are bewildering to the masculine understanding.

If fault were to be found with Mrs. Ayres' obviously earnest effort to utter her mind frankly and truthfully, as masculinity, in its moments of cynicism, has come to believe womanhood rarely does, it would be that she has overdone the emotional. As an offset to this churlish observation, however, it might be pleaded that Mrs. Ayres has shown, at least in her Mrs. Levesque, that a woman's emotions often are assumed for effect, and that when she wants to control them she has more admirable mastery over them than has man over his. Withal, though, it cannot be claimed that Mrs. Ayres has evinced in her treatment either of Mrs. Levesque or Mrs. Silas Ware, for the nonce Mrs. Acton, or even of the Mrs. Malaprop Cabinet woman, profound respect for what the world has come to regard as the virtues of human nature. That, however, the ambitious author has thought deeply along certain lines, and that there have come into her own life storms of sorrow that have left their mark is evidenced by flights of feminine philosophy and touches of pathos that, it is conceivable, Mrs. Ayres was not aware she was investing her work with.

While necessarily crude in some of its mechanism, the work as a whole is meritorious, and affords promise of a lighter and more enduring form of entertaining reading should Mrs. Ayres continue her commendable efforts to portray the real life of Washington. So many persons of broader experience in the art of writing have essayed this apparently unattainable goal that a woman less ambitious, earnest, and energetic than is the author of "The Conquest" would probably turn her capable mind to other fields for material. The material, of course, abounds in Washington in abundance, but somehow nobody has yet produced entirely adequate to the task of fully or even satisfactorily utilizing it. Mrs. Ayres has come as near to it as Mrs. Gertrude Franklin Atherton, for example, or perhaps nearer. With her knowledge of Washington, gained as an active and intelligent newspaper commentator, it seems strange that Mrs. Ayres should have fallen into the common error of confusing Senate procedure with that of the House. For instance, she has her "Senator Silas Ware," reach the limit of his time in a Senate speech, and be granted unanimous consent to proceed for a limited time longer. There is, of course, no limit on debate in the Senate, as in the House, though probably for dramatic effect it was necessary for Mr. Ayres to assume that there was. She is thus enabled to work up to a more fetching climax in her Senate scene than she might have been able to put the House clause rule upon the Senate.

Mrs. Ayres' few love scenes are a little too intense, if not overmuch realistic, to suit the comprehension, or perhaps the sensibilities, of some persons who will read "The Conquest." Besides, her women are too coldly calculating and worldly-wise, on the one hand, and too untouched of the world on the other to have surrendered themselves to such violent spasms of emotion. However, as the idea of dramatic effect palpably controlled Mrs. Ayres' purpose in working out her story, even these excesses are excusable. Whatever shortcomings may be found under this head are more than compensated by the really scintillant bursts of description that illumine nearly every page of the book.

Mrs. Ayres can almost be claimed as a native Washingtonian. A Virginian by birth, she is closely related to the Lees, the Fitzhughs, and many other of the well-known families of the Old Dominion. Her girlhood was spent in the bluegrass region of Kentucky, and her acquaintance with the brilliant Henry Watterson is plainly marked in her work. Mrs. Ayres has lived in Washington a dozen years or so, and now that her literary career has fairly begun, her friends confidently expect notable achievements for her.

ARRANGING FOR EXHIBIT.

Philippines Display at Jamestown to Be Complete.

Frank A. Small, from Norfolk, is in Washington in the interests of the Philippine exhibit at the Jamestown Exposition. Mr. Small says every effort has been made to make the exhibit truly representative. Selections of people have been made from five of the most important tribes of the islanders, and from these and their work a very good idea of the natives can be formed.

The Moros and Bagobos are two of the most interesting and picturesque tribes of all the uncivilized peoples of the archipelago, and their representatives at Jamestown will doubtless attract much attention. Of the civilized tribes representative have been selected from the Visayans, Tagalogs, and Ilocanos. These people will be occupied during the period of the exposition in weaving the beautiful textiles of the islanders, in pottery work, silversmithing, carpentry, wood carving, and blacksmithing, all according to the native fashion, while the wild tribes will give their war and peace dances and demonstrations of their dexterity with the spear, the bolo, and other implements of war, both on land and in native canoes on water.

Many tons of exhibits have been brought from the islands. The inclosure of this exhibit covers five acres, and each tribe has its separate village.

Mr. Small predicts for the exposition great success, especially so in its marine and military features, and says that its commercial and industrial features will surprise old exposition followers by its completeness.

NEGRO TABLEAUX PLANNED.

Progress of Race to Be Demonstrated at Jamestown Exposition.

An agreement has been entered into between the executive committee designated by the general government to prepare the negro exhibit for the Jamestown Ter-Centennial Exposition and Miss Meta Vaux Warrick, of Philadelphia, a sculptor of international repute, by which the latter is to furnish a series of illuminated tableaux illustrative of the history of the negro race from the landing of the first boat load of African slaves on the James River, in 1619, to the present day. It is Miss Warrick's plan to show by the construction of appropriate models, dramatic groupings, and the use of suitable scenic accessories, to trace in chronological order the progress of the negro people in all the arts of civilization. There will be fifteen model groups, each of the basic dimensions of ten feet long by ten feet wide, the figures to be one-fourth life size, making in all an exhibit covering more than 1,500 square feet of floor space.

Miss Meta Vaux Warrick is a young colored woman of unusual intelligence. Her education was acquired in the Drexel School of Fine Arts, in Philadelphia, of which city she is a native. She has taken supplementary courses in several of the leading art institutes in Paris, France.

A Box-office Trick.

A tongue-tied grafter, who has either assumed that defect of speech or turned a natural deformity to account, has been turning a new trick on that long-suffering person, the theater treasurer, says the New York Telegraph.

This artist gets into the line at the box office when business is at its height, and when his turn comes produces a parcel for the star of the piece. Of course there is something to collect. He got $1.35 at the Hudson on a package ostensibly for Edward Abeles and 75 cents at the Hackett for one addressed to Miss Stahl.

As proof that this artist, though a piker, is an artist, at the Hackett Theater he signed the receipt with the name "O'Brien." Miss Stahl's name in "The Chorus Lady" is Patricia O'Brien.

Poem to F. C. Bangs.

On the occasion of the farewell testimonial benefit to Frank C. Bangs, which was given in the Casino in New York on Tuesday, February 19, with brilliant artistic and substantial material results, the following lines, written by Randolph Hartley, were delivered at the opening of the performance by Mrs. Fiske:

His name is spoken with doubtful beauty upon the star of "Captain Jinks," and that the foolish son of Harvard had followed his presentation with fervid inquiries as to how Miss Barrymore liked the portrait.

Of course, being a well-bred girl, our Ethel declared herself delighted with the picture.

"But do you think it quite does me justice?" persisted the young Miss Barrymore bent one of those quelling glances upon him.

"Oh, yes; justice tempered with mercy," she replied, frigidly.

Clyde Fitch's play, "The Truth," has been shelved and the piece has been returned to the author. It is probable that it will be revised and brought out later under another name.
