Class Hymn — 1914

To-day we start upon the sea of life,
The cruise is long, our tiny barks are frail,
But Thou, Oh God, wilt guide us on our way
And give us strength to brave the roughest gale.

Tossed here and there as life still ebbs and flows,
When skies are bleak and darkness fills the air,
Father, who art our Guide and Changeless Friend,
Grant us Thy tenderness and loving care.

We need Thy help throughout our work in life;
Inspire in us ambitions high and true,
And drive away the fogs and sudden mists,
That life's bright guiding star may be in view.

When twilight deepens, and our cruise is o'er,
Direct our helms, that we may rest once more
Within Thy sheltered harbor with old friends
And near the sunset glowing on the shore.

"Auld Lang Syne"

Song of 1862 by Miss Ellen Hyde

A moment from the beaten track, —
The dusty path of life, —
We've turned to pause beneath the shade
And rest us from the strife;
A moment clasped each other's hands,
A moment, — 'twould not last;
And now we sadly say "Good-by,"
And add it to the past.
To auld lang syne, my friends —
To auld lang syne, —
We'll add one golden memory more
To auld lang syne.

Good-by; we go where care and joy
Are mingled in our way;
Strong be our hearts and swift our hands,
For all we've heard to-day;
And wheresoe'er our wanderings be,
In shadow or in shine,
We'll keep one pleasant memory still
Of auld lang syne.
Of auld lang syne, my friends,
Of auld lang syne,
We'll keep a blessed memory yet
Of auld lang syne.

Class Hymn — 1864

Words by Mrs. Fanny Whitcomb Bigelow

Raise aloud the voice of song!
Hills and valleys, roll along
Strains of liberty!
Wave our starry flag on high;
Lift it proudly to the sky,
Banner of the free!

Never fear the Storm King's power!
See! the threatening war-clouds lower
Round our flag in vain;
Glorious shall it ever wave
O'er the land of patriots brave,
And of noble slain!

Speed the glad, triumphant day,
When the clouds shall melt away!
Sun of Peace, arise!
Then from joyful hearts we'll raise
Shouts of freedom, songs of praise,
Reaching to the Skies.
