GET READY OUR EXHIBIT

E. Percy Pond, collector of exhibits for the A. Y. P. exposition, is in the city. He has been up the Chilkat and to the Porcupine country and brings a fine collection of photographic views, besides having arranged for contributions of various sorts. He believes Skagway has a chance to do big things for itself in a business way at the big show and that it should not lose time in getting ready an exhibit that will attract visitors here and something to entertain the visitors when they shall have arrived to detain them for a bit. He thinks we should get out a block of granite that is in the hills along side the dock offering opportunity for investment. A good exhibit could be made of it he thinks. Mr. Pond will remain here a few days and then goes to Berner's Bay, Juneau and down the islands to Wrangell and Ketchikan.

WIND IS IN THE SOUTH

It is a pretty storm that has been blowing for the past two days. Joe Shirley, who has a gang of men at work building the bunkers below the wharf, is authority for the statement that the wind is in the south. He can feel it go by. His men, by constant practice these many months, are adept at dodging and making the best of queer conditions for pile driving and such, but lately they have had to guess pretty hard. Mariners from out on the canal also report strenuous times. As a mere "approach" to the equinox it will serve.

CAPTAIN J. J. HEALY IS DEAD

(By United Press.)
Los Angeles, Sept. 17.—Captain John J. Healy, founder and former manager at Dawson and on the Yukon of the N. A. T. & T. company, dropped dead of heart failure today.

(Captain J. J. Healy was a pioneer of Alaska and the Yukon and no man was better known in the north. He had a remarkable career as a frontiersman. He was known in every mining camp in the west years ago and came to Alaska after a sensational career as deputy marshal and sheriff in Montana. He established a trading post at Dyea about 1893 and there, through the migration of prospectors, became acquainted with the possibilities of the interior. He went to Chicago and secured the aid of the Cudahys and founded the N. A. T. & T. company, which soon became an active and powerful competitor of the Alaska Commercial company, before that time the sole commercial invader of the great north. Captain Healy was at Circle when the Klondike strike was made and became a large figure in the early and strenuous days of that historic damp. A quarrel with the Cudahys caused him to sever his connection with the company and for several years he has been heard of chiefly as the moving figure in the Alaska-Siberia railroad enterprise.)

GOOD CONCERT POOR CROWD

That there was so small an audience at Elks' hall last evening was a thing regrettable to all who were there and would be to others if they could be made to understand what a really fine entertainment they missed. The band made a strong impression on every individual of the audience. Perhaps it was because not so much was expected, and so a most agreeable surprise was created. No doubt this impression, that not much was to be expected, accounted for the absence of many music lovers. The program was a varied one with three solos in the program of ten numbers, a cornet by J. Gilliam, "Down on the Farm," a clarinet by A. Hughes, "Fantasia on Weber's Last Waltz," and a trombone by the director, Prof. Fred Wasterlain. These, and all numbers were enthusiastically applauded. Many in the audience were of the opinion that were the band to stay over it would have a crowded house at a second appearance. After the concert Prof. Wasterlain invited all to remain and dance till they tired and this they did. What had been a poor crowd for a concert became a good crowd for a dance and with this excellent music to inspire them all danced until midnight.
